

Evening Gowns, Striped Pants a Must Today

OTTAWA (CP)—For the fourth consecutive time since the end of the Second World War the opening of Parliament today will be a formal affair—women in evening dress and men in morning coats and striped pants.

Military and diplomatic representatives will wear the official dress of their rank and country.

After the outbreak of the Second World War the form of dress was made optional for those attending the colorful ceremony in the Senate chamber. This continued during the post-war period until October, 1957, when formal dress was required for the opening of Parliament by the Queen.

Following the Progressive Conservative election victory in 1958, Senate Speaker Mark Drouin made formal dress a requirement for parliamentary openings.

Women attending the opening are careful to select gowns that complement the scarlet-red carpet in the upper chamber.

Mrs. Georges P. Vanier will make history for she will be the first consort of a Canadian governor-general to accompany her husband at the opening of Parliament. (Former Governor-General Massey, first Canadian representative of the Queen in Canada, was a widower.)

She will sit to the left of Governor-General Vanier as he reads the speech from the throne setting out the sessional legislative program of the government.

Mrs. John Diefenbaker, wife of the prime minister, will wear a statuetque sheath gown of cream satin brocade embroidered in gold and cocoa thread, enhanced by a side-panel.

She will be beside Mr. Diefenbaker and Senate Leader Walter Aestline and Mrs. Aestline to greet the governor-general and Mme. Vanier on their arrival from Government House.

Canada's stately, silver-haired first lady will wear a gown of ruby red velvet styled with a full skirt, square neckline and tight-fitting sleeves.

However, Canada's three women members of the Commons will not wear formal attire. Immigration Minister Fairclough, Margaret Aitken, Conservative member for York-Humber, and Mrs. Jean Casselman, Conservative member for Grenville-Dundas, have chosen afternoon dresses.

Fire Truck Ignores Shut Firehall Door

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The fire truck raced out on a fire alarm Tuesday night, right through the door of the new $85,000 fire station.

Officials said the door had been lifted by automatic equipment, but it apparently closed again just as the engine was starting its run.

Opens Today Battling Session Expected

OTTAWA (CP) — The government and opposition parties square off today in what may be the fightingest session of Parliament since the Progressive Conservatives came to power in 1957.

The final touches were put on the government's legislative program earlier this week. Indications are that it will be relatively light but the Liberal and CCF opposition groups will not lack for issues on which to fight the government.

BIG ISSUES

The big issues likely will be related to the government's defence, financial and trade policies.

The government will propose Jacques Flynn (PC—Quebec South) as deputy speaker of the Commons, succeeding associate defence minister Severyn who relinquished that office on entering the cabinet.

NO TROUBLE

Relying on its big majority, the government is unlikely to experience any trouble beating down opposition motions. Standing in the 265-member Commons is: Progressive Conservatives 208, Liberals 49, CCF 8.

In the field of legislation, the government is expected to re-introduce Prime Minister Diefenbaker's proposed Bill of Rights, combines legislation, and a measure to remove the requirement that recipients of Old-Age Pensions must live at least six months of the year in Canada.

NUCLEAR SCRAPS

On defence, Liberals and CCF may concentrate heavily on government plans to acquire nuclear weapons, and especially on arrangements for custody of nuclear missile warheads and control of their operational use.

High interest rates and tight money can be expected to become familiar words once again during Commons debates.

Canada's perennial trade deficit is also likely to be a major topic.

Reds Voluble, Canada Mum

OTTAWA (UPI) — Northwest Territories councillor Robert Parritt said Wednesday it was easier to obtain information from the Soviet Embassy about the Russian north than it was from the federal government about the Canadian north.

He said the Soviet Embassy here regularly sends him its daily news bulletin while he must write to several government departments to get information about going-on concerning northern Canada.

Ill Wind Blows Good for Skindivers

While most Victorians stayed close to the fireplace yesterday when bitterly cold gusts up to 63 miles an hour buffeted the area, a half dozen intrepid skindivers took advantage of the occasion along Willows Beach to ride the big breakers on surf

State of Emergency Proclaimed

Heavy Peru Quake Kills 63 Hawaii Hit, Volcano Erupts

Damage Widespread; Bolivia, Chile Shaken

LIMA, Peru (AP)—Sixty-three persons were killed and more than 200 were injured Wednesday in an earthquake felt in three countries, according to radio reports from the area.

A state of emergency was proclaimed in Southern Peru. The quake shook areas of Peru, Bolivia and Chile.

EMERGENCY CITED

The reports from Arequipa, in southern Peru, said the suburbs of Tingo, Tabaya and Miraflores were hardest hit. Another minor quake was felt in the region, the reports said, but there was no word of additional casualties or damage.

The major quake occurred early yesterday morning. First reports from the area were fragmentary. Landslides knocked out communication lines, hampering receipt of detailed reports of casualties and damage. But the quake was said to have caused widespread destruction.

PLANES SENT

The quake also was strong at Cuzco and Ica in Southeast Peru and in nearby Bolivia. It was felt as far south as Santiago, Chile, but was not severe there.

Arequipa is about 460 miles southeast of Lima.

City Graph Got Record

The quake was recorded with an intensity of seven on the seismograph at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory here.

Instruments were activated at 7 a.m., seismologist W. G. Milne said. "It was definitely as intense as the Montana quake last summer."

Russia Right

Russia has every right under international law to test a powerful new space rocket over the central Pacific, President Eisenhower said yesterday. He said it would be "very unusual" for the U.S. to protest since it started such tests.

'Disaster' Declared

KAPOHO, Hawaii (UPI) — Kilauea volcano erupted in a stream of molten lava last night hours after the 300 residents of Kapoho village had been evacuated because of pre-eruption earthquakes.

The eruption came a mile and a half north of Kapoho at approximately the same place that the volcano broke loose on Feb. 28, 1955, and discharged lava for 89 days. The sky was lit with a red glow.

NO SURPRISE

The eruption came as no surprise as quakes had been jolting Kapoho at the rate of five a minute.

Kapoho was declared a disaster area and its residents evacuated because the lives of some 6,700 persons living in the district were threatened. The quakes split the streets of Kapoho.

Money-Talks Line 'A Complete Lie'

Traffic Drove Man to Drink

VANCOUVER (CP)—The traffic here drove Clement Conture, 28, an out-of-town logger, to drink, he told police Tuesday. He said he couldn't drive unless he had been drinking.

He was fined $125 for impaired driving and his licence was suspended for six months.

CONST.
COLIN ERIC LELLIOTT

Colwood Mountie Slain

A young RCMP constable from Colwood was killed while trying to arrest an Eskimo for drunkenness at Cambridge Bay, N.W.T., north of the Arctic Circle.

The shooting of 22-year-old Constable Colin Eric Lelliott was the first violent death of a Mountie in the Arctic since Albert Johnson, the notorious "mad trapper," gunned two officers 28 years ago.

RCMP headquarters in Ottawa reported Wednesday that Constable Lelliott was killed by rifle fire at 7:45 a.m. Tuesday while trying to arrest

Anti-German Tide Rising in Britain

LONDON (Reuters) — Widespread anti-German feeling was spreading throughout Britain Wednesday as a protest against the neo-Nazi, Jew-baiting outbreak in Germany.

The West German embassy claimed that German employees are being dismissed from British firms, German products are being boycotted, and threatening letters connected with the anti-Semitic incidents are pouring into the embassy.

INSULTED IN STREETS

The issue broke out in big newspaper headlines in West Germany and was confirmed here by the embassy.

"Germans are being insulted in the streets" in England, one German newspaper report said.

Theft Foiled On Train

—Police and railway investigators are searching for a train robber and two accomplices who were foiled in a robbery attempt aboard the Montreal-Toronto express yesterday. Their goal was a large amount of furs.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

Cars need not go down in price as they get older. Sometimes their value improves with age.

I was reminded of this fact while talking to Phil Foster, antique car collector, who has long cherished a plan to open an automotive museum with government backing.

Collecting antique cars was a hobby that Phil pursued during 20 years as a service station operator. (He sold out his station a few years ago). "I had a number of my cars in an old barn on Craigflower Road," he said. "But the property was subdivided, and the barn had to be torn down. I kept 10 of the real old ones, which I have in my basement."

"But I had to let the others go."

"Who bought them?" I asked.

Veterans, Not Antiques

"Victoria people," he said. "I hope they look after them. I think they will. They're not really antique cars. You'd call them veteran cars."

"They're interesting enough to be in a museum, though?" I asked.

"They will be, in time," Mr. Foster said. "But in Victoria, a lot of the veteran cars are still on the streets."

"Is it correct to say that after a certain time, a car may cease to go down in value and may actually increase, as a collector's item?"

Still Some on Streets

"But they'll be good for a museum in five or 10 years from now, when there aren't so many on the streets."

"And then there are the classic cars, of no particular age, which are good to keep... I know a map who has a couple of Packards and a Rolls-Royce; he's keeping them up well."

"There are quite a few good cars around, Packards in the 30's and 40's, a Hupmobile and a Whippet in the 20's, a nice little Plymouth."

MISS SYBIL CONNELLY

Plea for Starving

Children Go First When Crops Fail

About two-thirds of the world's children have never had enough to eat, Miss Sybil Connelly, secretary-treasurer of the British Columbia branch of the Save The Children Fund, said here yesterday.

"They're chronically hungry," she said. "If there is a crop failure many will never see the winter out."

"Children are the weakest. They die first."

Last summer Miss Connelly toured the 14 countries which have STCF teams working in them. The worst areas are in southern Italy, Greece, the Middle East and Africa, she said.

Food is so scarce in East Africa that crippled babies are sometimes left beside the road to die.

Money donated to the fund is spent on food, clothing, and medical supplies, and on such projects as leprosanatoriums and nursery schools.

Reich Party Facing Ban

BONN, Germany (UPI) — The government of Chancellor Adenauer was reported yesterday to have discussed possible outlawing of the right-wing German Reich Party and further crackdowns on neo-Nazis to halt outbreaks of anti-Semitism.

Adenauer flew back from a two-day trip to West Berlin and went into secret session with his cabinet to consider the anti-Jewish acts which have occurred since Christmas.

Future of Refugee Minister Theodor Oberlander also was discussed.

The socialist opposition has demanded that Oberlander quit because of his acknowledged past record as a Nazi. Oberlander has been under attack recently because of his alleged complicity in the murder of Polish Jews during the Second World War.

He has denied the charges, but public opinion in several countries has built up against him. Last Monday, the European director of the American Jewish Congress made a bitter attack on him and demanded he resign.

A spokesman for the interior ministry said it had been decided to drop a proposal to prosecute the Reich Party, fearing the supreme court might throw out the case. But he said the government intended to continue its investigations into the party's activities.

Angered Eisenhower Denies U.S. Military Might Slipping

WASHINGTON (CP) — His face flushed, President Eisenhower angrily denied Wednesday that United States military power has slipped under his guidance. He accused those who take a partisan view of defence as doing a disservice to the country.

The president's temper, seldom out of control, was brought to the boil by a reporter's suggestion that critics maintain Eisenhower "kissed off" the defence issue in his state of the union message to Congress last week.

Eisenhower told his press conference he had lived with military problems all his life and probably knew more about defence than any one in the U.S.

E. H. Swayne Dies in City

Frank Herbert Swayne, partner in the insurance firm of Hagar & Swayne, died yesterday in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Mr. Swayne, who was born in Kilkenny, Ireland, came to Canada in 1908, serving in the Bank of Commerce in many West Coast centres. During the First World War he served with the Royal Canadian Engineers. He came to Victoria in 1931 from Port Alberni and retired two years ago.

He is survived by his widow, Elsie, at the residence, 2493 Currie Road; a cousin, Mrs. C. I. MacKenzie of Victoria; a nephew, Brian Hamilton of Seattle, and a niece, Moira Swayne of Vancouver.

Able Wolfits Make Shakespeare Live

By BERT BINNY

A big house was on hand last night at the Royal Theatre to greet Sir Donald Wolfitt and Rosalind Iden (Lady Wolfitt) in "Scenes from Shakespeare."

It is probably true to say that such is the massiveness of Shakespeare's writing that nothing far short of massive speaking will give it the effect it deserves.

In this day and age, artists capable of imparting this effect are few and far between. But both Sir Donald and his wife are among them.

MEANING THERE This is not to say that either of them leaned in the declamatory direction to the sacrifice of meaning. Much the opposite, they made even the deeply picturesque words of Shakespeare, clothed in simile and strange allusions as they are, replete with significance.

"I've spent my life in this, and I know more about it than almost anybody, I think, that is in the country, and on a basis of doing what is good for the government and for the country."

He rejected any contention that he would be crawling to a summit conference out of fear of Russia's missiles might and vigorously denied that U.S. military strength had fallen to second best position. "Such an argument as that pre-supposes that I come to any argument, to any conversation in the feel of inferiority, that I am a little bit frightened, and I assure you I am not."

"I believe in the United States' power, and I believe it is there, not to be used, but to make certain that the other fellow doesn't use his."

The program opened with three speeches by Sir Donald Wolfitt from "Henry V." followed by the scene depicting the quarrel between Oberon and Titania from "A Midsummer Night's Dream," both roles being spoken by Rosalind Iden.

DIABOLICAL KING The first two scenes of the first act of "Richard III" were next, and here Sir Donald achieved a truly marvellous characterization as the diabolical Richard.

In excerpts from "Macbeth," Rosalind Iden was especially convincing as Lady Macbeth; it was easy to understand why Macbeth capitulated to her iron will and unrelenting ambition.

The program concluded on a lighter note with a shortened version of the wooing of Katharine by Petruchio from "The Taming of the Shrew."

MAJ. GEN. PENHALE
... 'confusion, delay'

Director Attacks Civil Defence

OTTAWA (Special)—Division of civil defence responsibilities among four different departments of government will lead to "confusion, overlapping and delay," a senior civil defence official has charged in written criticism of the government's policy.

The attack was made by Maj. Gen. M. H. S. Penhale, head of the Canadian Civil Defence College at Annapolis, writing in the annual RCAF staff college journal.

Gen. Penhale, who reaches the retirement age of 65 next month, directed his criticism against the new civil defence organization, which divides responsibility between the emergency measures office under the prime minister, the army, the justice department and the health and welfare department.

Gen. Penhale also complains against a tendency on the part of the government to withhold information on the extent of the disaster that would occur in the event of all-out nuclear attack for fear of causing public alarm.

Gen. Penhale estimated that if an attack was carried out against the 13 target centres in Canada with a population totalling 5,000,000 there would be 3,500,000 killed if there was no advance preparation.

Jimmy Ayalik, 24-year-old Eskimo.

MOTHER HERE

Const. Lelliott was the son of Mrs. Earl Leggate Leslie, 3031 Pickford.

"Mad trapper" Johnson provided the Arctic's greatest crime epic and one of Canada's most famous manhunters.

Hearing reports that he was interfering with Indians' traps, Constable Bunce King went to investigate at Rat Rapids near the Arctic Red River in December, 1931.

King was shot to death through the door of Johnson's blockhouse-like cabin. Later, an eight-man posse using dynamite failed to dislodge the trapper.

After returning to base for supplies, the posse pursued him and Constable Newt Millen was killed in a gun battle.

EPIC CHASE

The posse was helped in the search by a plane flown by Wilfred R. (Wop) May, famous First World War flier and bush pilot.

After a chase lasting more than a month, Johnson was overtaken in the open and killed by gunfire Feb. 17, 1932, after wounding Sgt. Heps Hersey, army wireless operator.

Const. Lelliott was born in Worthing, Sussex, England, and came with his family to Ontario in 1947, and to Victoria eight months later.

He was educated here for the most part, graduating from Belmont High School. Prior to his enlistment in the RCMP on Jan. 3, 1957, he worked for a few months as a civilian with "E" detachment, RCMP, in Victoria, and as a clerk with the Hudson's Bay Co. store while awaiting acceptance in the police force.

After training at Regina, Const. Lelliott was posted to Ottawa and New Brunswick stations before going to Fort Smith in the north in June of 1959. He was there until Nov. 25, and then posted to Cambridge Bay.

He liked the northern posts, his mother said yesterday.

In addition to his mother and her husband, the young officer is survived by a sister, Cynthia Bawn, married to a member of the RCAF stationed in England.

Keep Out of Paradise!

HONOLULU (UPI)—Why can't science stay out of paradise's backyard?

First it was the British with their H-bomb; now it's the Russians with their missiles. Paradise's owner is peeved.

"We don't like any military movement around there, whether it's the Russians, the British or the Americans," said Leslie Fullard-Leo of Honolulu. He was talking about his property, Palmyra.

The little atoll of coral islets, topped with palms that whisper in the central Pacific's soft breezes, lies 960 miles southwest of here and is the U.S. territory closest to the Soviet rocket test area.

Fullard-Leo wants to turn it into a romantic Polynesian fishing resort of the sort that tourists think of as an island paradise in the Pacific. But starting Friday until Feb. 15, an area only 250 miles south of Palmyra will be restricted by Russia for rocket testing.

The only inhabitants of Palmyra are two dozen U.S. Air Force scientists who are ending a two-year classified, research project and will leave this month. The team's "studies" were believed to have been connected with British H-bomb tests.

In 1957, Fullard-Leo objected "most strenuously" to the H-bomb testing at Christmas Island, 350 miles away.

He voiced the same warning to Russia, but isn't really in a billion they'll hit Palmyra," he said.

TCA's Firm Stand

UNEQUIVOCAL declaration yesterday by Trans-Canada Air Lines that it wishes to retain direct Vancouver Island service through Patricia Bay as part of the national airway has cleared the air. Through its Vancouver and Victoria offices, the headquarters' statement was handed by letter to the transportation committee of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and copies to the press. The letter indicated flatly that TCA will oppose application by PWA or any other interests to the air board affecting its present charter for the service; on the grounds of national interest, and through its desire to retain the Pacific coast services which it has built up.

This declaration is what Victoria has been waiting for, in its openly expressed desire to see TCA continue the service it pioneered here. The first result was the unanimous support offered by the transportation and harbor group of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, which had been pressing for some clarification of the issue. TCA's stand also was warmly commended in city and business circles, where this assurance had been asked for. Although there had been little but conjecture previously as to what might happen on the air board's hearing an application for transfer of the Victoria-Vancouver charter, TCA's firm stand lengthens the odds against any change.

The Canadian Air Board has the authority to decide charter rights. It is most unlikely, however, in the face of TCA's announced stand that there will be any "auctioning" of the Victoria-Vancouver link which the nationally-owned system developed and brought to fruition. As the capital city of British Columbia, Victoria remains very keenly interested in seeing that it keeps its direct connection with the transcontinental airway; that the service will be ample, flexible and assured; and that as soon as possible Patricia Bay airport will be put in full shape by the Dominion to serve the jet and other aircraft coming into use across the nation. When that is done Victoria will have its earned and cherished place on the air map.

Nevil Shute

THE English-speaking world is the poorer for the untimely death of the distinguished author Nevil Shute, English by birth, Australian by adoption a decade ago. Nevil Shute was one of the outstanding writers of modern times, and his unpublished autobiography, "Slide Rule," is the account of a remarkable metamorphosis.

Although known to the world as an author, Mr. Nevil Shute Norway, to give him his full name, was until relatively late in life an aeronautical engineer who mainly in the years between the two wars was instrumental in the shaping of Britain's aircraft industry. Associated with the design, construction and experimental operation of the last of the British dirigibles, he later displayed his engineering talents, and organizing ability to greater purpose in the founding and development of companies to construct civilian aircraft of conventional type and steadily improving design. His last-war experiences as a technical expert in the Royal Navy make an enthralling story in themselves.

Somewhat like Winston Churchill with his books and bricklaying, Nevil Shute first used fiction writing as a means of relaxation and escape. In his romantic writing there was nothing of the meticulous scientist or the cold company executive. He wrote of ordinary people with an intensity of feeling and understanding which brought his characters to life for the reader. There was a strain of sadness and tenderness in many of his books, but he possessed that rare gift of being able to distinguish between pathos and bathos.

An idealist with his feet still firmly on the ground, Nevil Shute combined his technical knowledge and understanding of the ways of man to produce books which have since proved to be prophetic. His latest, "On the Beach," is one which is fervently to be hoped does not belong to that category. As a fictional glimpse of the future, it describes the gradual but inexorable depopulation of the world by nuclear fallout. There can be little doubt that he wrote this terrifying story for a purpose. If so and if it aids the cause of world disarmament, which it should, Nevil Shute's posthumous honors will be much greater than those ordinarily accorded to notable writers.

Making the Name Valid

SHAKESPEARE asked "What's in a Name?" in referring to a rose and rightly enough it would smell as sweet though called something else. Names are not to be dismissed as of small consequence, nevertheless. A university could be called a school, a forum, a college, a seminary or what one will, and its function would be unimpaired; its programs of learning would remain the same.

The word "university" has come to be associated however with the highest form of educational institution, and it identifies the status that is its corollary. In both academic and public circles it speaks for itself. That is why one welcomes the decision of the Victoria College council to request the government to effect a change of its official title.

This will make formal what has been introduced as unofficial during the current university fund drive. The word "university" is being used to strengthen the appeal by conveying to the public the heightened nature of its responsibilities. These are the extension of past curriculums into full degree-bearing courses. The college's functions have been enlarged to those of a university in appropriate faculties, and formal change of name will make officially valid what is now a fact.

The name of Victoria College has been an honorable one over the years and the local institution has gained academic distinction because of its high standards of teaching and the quality of its students. Its elevation to university status will enable it to enhance even its present reputation in wider measure. It should be a matter of pride also to both the college and the community—as it is a mark of recognition—that it has now won the right to be known throughout the academic world as "University of Victoria."

Several legal steps require to be taken to give effect to the change of name, but these are merely matters of process and not of hindrance. Since Premier Bennett himself appreciates the desirability of making manifest by formal alteration of title the college's new status, presumably advantage will be taken of the forthcoming legislative session at James Bay to give effect to the change.

Trade Talks in Progress

By DAVE OANCIAC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

AN uneasy Atlantic alliance this week tackles the task of patching up trade quarrels and mapping a program to fight an anticipated all-out Communist economic offensive during the 1960s.

Canada and the United States join their European allies in a series of high-level talks in Paris that could eventually lead to the creation of an organization for Atlantic economic co-operation.

Its objectives would be to boost free world trade and to launch a massive aid plan for underdeveloped countries. Its birth might spell the end of the Organization for European Economic Co-operation, which embraces 18 countries.

The special conference—first for the Western finance ministers since the collapse of the European free trade area negotiations in 1959—will have the immediate goal of heading off a trade war in the Western camp.

It also is an open recognition that the nature of the cold war is changing. The world is heading into a period of intense economic competition, and the West must make a gigantic effort to prevent Soviet gains in the uncommitted areas.

Meeting in Paris this week in an attempt to deal with the twin problem facing the West are ministers from France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Britain, Switzerland, Portugal, Denmark, Greece, Sweden, The Netherlands, Canada, the United States and the secretariat of the European common market.

Talks during the sessions will focus on pressing problems.

Discrimination against dollar goods is one, Canada and the United States feel there is no justification whatever for these restrictions and will urge prompt action to remove them. Canada also is expected to voice her concern about the possible restrictive features of the common market's agricultural policy to be announced during the next month.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."
By TOM TAYLOR

WORDS add to their meanings throughout the centuries, which is why the dictionary is so full of definitions, some of them contrary.

One word obviously undergoing a change is "alibi," raised in semantic status the other day by External Affairs Minister Green. When a cabinet minister uses a word it behooves lesser mortals to take note and enrich their own vocabularies.

In a gentle little exchange of back-hand courtesy, quite normal to politicians of different guiding lights, Mr. Green said in his reference to the Dominion-provincial wrangle over European refugees that Premier Bennett was resorting to an "alibi."

He meant by this that Mr. Bennett was making an "excuse."

Now if you look up the dictionary nowhere do you find that "alibi" and "excuse" are related in any way, except colloquially, which is unofficial.

"Alibi," so far, is limited only to a single meaning, to wit: the plea of having been in a different place at the alleged time of the commission of an offence. If iron-clad an alibi sets an accused free. "Alibi" itself, I believe, was originally a Latin word meaning "elsewhere."

Words, however, like the cosmetic business, gradually acquire new shades and come to be applied in fresh contexts. The dictionary lags behind, as it is bound to do. Men spoke before they wrote.

Thus "alibi" has been used by all and sundry for quite some time in place of the word "excuse," and now the term is graced by the lips of a high-ranking politician. It will not receive official approval, of course, until it is included in this sense among the sacred words of lexicographers, and until then will be a bit of an outsider. The traditionalists can say that Mr. Green was incorrect when he threw "alibi" at Mr. Bennett.

Inevitably, as seems likely, the dictionary will have to acknowledge common usage and incorporate "alibi" as a legitimate brother of "excuse."

The word "excuse" itself has widened its meaning considerably over the decades in order to keep up with the spoken habits of people, so there is close precedent for the blessing of this use of "alibi."

The dictionary defines "excuse" as all sorts of things: an apology, an exemption, a pardon, a justification, a release. In their own separate contexts these variants are not one and the same. This is the beauty of the English language: it bows to human habit once that habit has been established.

This is also the difference between a living and a dead language. There has to be a transition period, naturally, to see whether a spoken word becomes respectable, as it were. "Alibi" has been used so widely in place of "excuse" however one expects that the next edition of a ranking dictionary will implant its accolade on such use.

Even if it does not, "alibi" as an "excuse" and not as an "elsewhere" is making headway. When it comes to be banded about in the highest political circles then obviously it is going places.

Following the example of Mr. Green, indeed, one imagines the coming Hansard will be dotted with "alibis" in replacement of overworked "excuses."

Reports from Ottawa

THE Russian decision to fire inter-continental ballistic missiles into the Pacific, in full view of the West, is special news for the folks at North Bay. And at defence headquarters. And in parliament.

It indicates the Russians are confident as to both the range and accuracy of their ICBMs.

If their confidence is well based, that would indicate that the era of long-range, push-button warfare is here, and that fixed missile bases like those we are planning to establish at North Bay and Mount Laurier are already obsolete. Sitting ducks, as it were, for Russian ICBMs.

The Americans are aware of this. In an editorial favoring "mobile missile platforms"—in the air, under the sea, on railways—the Providence, Rhode Island, Journal recently pointed out that "the value of any exposed, fixed base... declines just as rapidly as the accuracy and dependability of the enemy's missiles go up."

Is our defence department aware of it? Doubt as to the value of fixed Bomarc bases is only one of several aspects of the government's defence policy with which parliament soon will be concerning itself.

Another: Should the CF-100 used by nine home defence squadrons be replaced by more modern interceptors? If the answer is yes, the choice would be either buying new planes from the U.S., whether assembled in Canada or not, or accepting a gift of U.S. planes as military aid. If we buy, we must invest several hundred million dollars in a weapon already made obsolete by the ICBM, and which international agreement on disarmament might force us to junk as soon as built. But if we accept new planes as gifts from the U.S., we further compromise our independence.

If the answer is no, we can scarcely deny our ally permission to station U.S.A.F. squadrons on Canadian soil to cope with the still potent Russian bomber threat.

Also there is the troubling question of atomic or nuclear arms—not only the control of atomic warheads for Canadian Bomarc, but the disconcerting decision, in terms of international relations, to arm the air division overseas with atomic bombs for attacking ground targets.

Another question: If the hydrogen-headed ICBM is too lethal to all humanity ever to be used in war, do we need to beef up our conventional weapons, as Maj. Gen. W. H. S. Macklin suggests, to be ready for the only kind of war Russia would dare to fight?

Or should we take that "calculated risk" that falls so glibly off the lip, and do nothing in the hope that disarmament talks will make new arms expenditure unnecessary in a year or two?

The value of much of the navy is in question. So is the value vs. cost of the army brigade group overseas. Should we channel more money and effort into anti-ICBM research? Should we try to give disarmament an impetus by a unilateral cut in our military forces?

These are vital questions. Should their answers be left solely to the government and its military advisers? Or should there be a parliamentary inquiry of the type that Opposition Leader Pearson proposes; to hear and question top military men past and present, and anyone else who has worthwhile views to express?

The results so far—the cancelled Avros, the questionable Bomarc—have not been reassuring. Perhaps it is time to try this new approach to policy making.

Road to Fortune

By GREGORY CLARK

WHEN I called on my bank manager to pick up my 1960 calendar which he had forgotten to send me, I was carrying a parcel. And like all good bank managers, anxious to know what their customers are up to, he asked me what was in the parcel.

"I was just trying to exchange it," I explained, "for one of the same kind I had before. This new one is pure junk. Bears no resemblance to the one I had before."

We undid the parcel and I displayed the article, a household item of common usage.

"It's cheapened," I declared. "It has the same name and manufacturer."

It Is Hard To Forget

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

THE most dangerous problem now before the Western allies is not their differences over how to negotiate at the summit with the Russians. And it is never officially admitted to be a problem at all.

Responsible people here and abroad have understandably played down this situation, for already it serves Soviet interests as few things could. All the same, its gravity is becoming compelling and it needs to be mentioned out loud.

The plain fact is this: there is a steadily rising antagonism toward West Germany within the free world. This is especially, and critically, true in Britain—which is now the actual Western leader in policy-making for the coming summit conference with Premier Khrushchev of the Soviet Union.

A close association with West Germany has been at the very heart of Western policy since the cold war began about 1947. What is now going on is seriously straining these vitally necessary ties.

The immediately obvious cause of the new hostility toward the Germans is a series of crude anti-Jewish acts in West Germany. Chancellor Konrad Adenauer is moving fast and sincerely to punish this sort of thing and to see that it does not continue.

The West Germans suggest that Communist agents in East Germany have framed these incidents to attempt to show that a new Nazism is at work and so to hurt West Germany with her allies. With this estimate some informed officials in Washington entirely agree.

The real and basic difficulties, however, run far deeper. And they will not altogether be ended if Adenauer is able both to halt the outrages and to prove their Communist inspiration. For the simple truth is this, with full respect for the countless thousands of American families who lost men in the war: we never as a whole nation had more than the faintest awareness of the immeasurable evil and cruelties of the Nazi Germans.

Many other nations and peoples knew all too well. And, being human, they do not forget—the Jews everywhere, the Poles everywhere, the British, and many of the French and Belgians, among others.

Thus the nearer we approach that day when West Germany is to demand an important role in summit negotiations the more difficult it is for many to accept these German claims to place and power.

True, the Adenauer government is not responsible for the unspeakable brutalities of the old Hitler Germans. True, Adenauer Germany is making every honorable effort to repay society. But say all this and you still have not said quite enough for many—including a great majority in the British Isles.

The civilians there remember the long, savage, murderous air assaults upon London, the months and months of death and destruction and deprivation and despair when England stood alone. The ex-soldiers (and plenty of our own, too) remember this and more. They remember German actions—not only in the death camps but on the battlefield—against helpless men that will strain memory itself so long as life shall last.

This correspondent knows for a fact that these recollections are most widely held. For he, too—if a personal reference may be excused to support a point—remembers all this; sometimes in nightmares, for he witnessed sufferings of others that have persisted for a decade and a half and still come again and again.

Yes, the course of wisdom is to forget, and to draw up against the undoubted common peril, the Soviet Union. But let us not be too impatient with those who have so much reason to find forgetfulness so hard.

Bad Examples

TRAFFIC rules and regulations are made for the good of the general public, but there are many people who believe in observing them only under compulsion.

They figure it a waste of time to obey stop signs or other notices which are designed to protect against injury and confusion.

And the same people who ignore the traffic rules and regulations would reprimand offspring who attempted a similar manoeuvre. These parents adopt a "don't do as I do, do as I say," attitude, and then wonder why children are disobedient and sometimes get into difficulties.

We know of people who lecture their children on the dangers of disobeying traffic rules and then deliberately disregard them themselves while in company of their youngsters.

—ST. THOMAS TIMES-JOURNAL.

Sacred Trust

Sizeable areas within easy reach of the people of Victoria are rapidly disappearing. This loss is disturbing to that fraction of our youth who are now forsaking the car for the pleasures of the pack-sack and trail. This fraction is growing and although their numbers may not be large, let us not forget that the members of this group through their health and vitality are likely to become the leaders of tomorrow.

Some may think that the city of Victoria has too large an area of park lands, but don't forget that the people of today have to plan for the people of tomorrow. At the rate our population is increasing, within 50 years the inadequacy of our areas in parklands will be evident to all although apparent today only to those who have studied regional planning.

If the mayor and the council of the city of Victoria succumb to the pressure of strong commercial interests today, what will happen tomorrow when much more tempting offers are likely to be received. Land values in the Thetis Lake area are rising at tremendous rate.

The present mayor and council are merely the current administration of a trust in the shape of land laid aside by past administrations as parks. To rate 76 acres as a fraction of no consequence is absurd when future generations will undoubtedly consider the present area as inadequate.

Surely the mayor and council will see fit to preserve our Thetis Lake Park in its entirety as a sacred trust.

WILLIAM NEWTON.

No Tax Increase?

I cannot resist the urge to question publicly a recent statement in the press which was attributed to our premier. I read: "No tax increase in 1960."

It was not clear what tax he was referring to, if any. Every city seems to be heading for a substantially increased taxation to meet general expenses and school costs. In Port Alberni some business licences have more than doubled and property taxes have been raised.

But the crowning touch was when the motor vehicle branch sent out the 1960 licence forms for our one-ton truck—the smallest made next to a pickup. The increase was not 100, not 200, but over 300 per cent, from $35 to $115. I understand some of the larger freight lines fared better, their increase being only 220 per cent.

Is this what the premier meant by no tax increase? This is only one small item of a policy to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs. One of the lowest attitudes uncovered occurred a few months ago when it was announced that by the use of portable scales, the government could raise $250,000 in fines from truckers.

Control on the Malahat

The hazard of winter driving on the Malahat is established and prompts enquiry as to a "block system" of lights as a means of avoiding accidents. Train movements are protected in this way and the Malahat is particularly vulnerable to accident conditions in places at this period.

Installation of lights as needed would mitigate hazard and enable police to exercise more control.

Three Youths Charged

Thieves 'Just Car-Crazy'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said yesterday three car-crazy youths have been arrested in connection with the theft of 96 cars within one six-month period last year.

Two of the suspects, aged 18 and 16, face trial in police court on a total of 59 charges of car theft. The 16-year-old was originally sentenced to Industrial School in December for five car thefts, but was released Christmas Day during a holiday release and charged with another 42 offences, 15 of them during his holiday freedom.

A third youth, aged 15, now is at Industrial School for three car thefts, but faces another 27 counts in juvenile court, police said.

Detectives said the youths knew each other, but none is charged jointly. Police seized 61 sets of car keys from the youths and said they would fit almost every type of car in Vancouver.

About half of the stolen cars were sports models. Only one was damaged.

"All they wanted to do was go for a joy ride," a detective said. "They had no intention of stealing the cars for any other purpose. They were just car-crazy."

Pedestrian Hit by Car, Dances Jig

Allan R. Milner, of Cobble Hill, a pedestrian, declined a hospital checkup after he was struck by a car at the intersection of Broad and Yates at 8:30 p.m. yesterday.

Left front headlight of a car driven by James M. Greaves, 1339 Cordova Bay Road, was broken in the accident, but the driver was assured by the pedestrian that there was no injury.

"Look at me," Milner shouted as he danced a jig in the middle of the street, to prove his point.

'Vote as We Please'

NANAIMO — Civil servants are free to support the party of their choice and no labor body can force the B.C. Government Employees' Association to do anything as a body contrary to its constitution, association general secretary E. P. O'Connor told an audience of government workers Tuesday night.

"Neither the CLC, the B.C. Federation of Labor nor the local labor council has authority to dictate policy to any of their affiliates," Mr. O'Connor said.

"The CLC can make no decision that is binding on any union. It can only recommend. Under existing circumstances it is an insult to suggest that any organization, including our own, could tell us as individuals what political party to support," he said. "Our constitution says our union may not take part in partisan political activity. There is a definite line between political action and partisan political activity. Everything we have done since 1941 to secure better conditions and pay has been political action. As an organization we can't avoid political action."

Snow Halts 160 Loggers

CHEMAINUS — Heavy snowfall has closed logging operations out of the McMillan & Bloedel Copper Canyon camp, an official said yesterday.

Work ended for 160 men as snow in logging areas five to six miles beyond the camp piled to 16 inches without sign of letup at noon.

"But we have no right to tell other workers they shall not take partisan political action."

Eisenhower Says:

U.S. Never Planned Action in Indochina

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—President Eisenhower, answering a question at his press conference yesterday about Sir Anthony Eden's memoirs, said there never was any United States plan to intervene in the war in Indochina.

The president added that Sir Anthony was not an irresponsible person and was writing his story as he believed it to be.

The president was asked whether he would authorize the state department to give the press the United States version of what took place.

Eisenhower replied that he would have to talk with others about this suggestion.

Sir Anthony's memoirs were critical of the late John Foster Dulles and quoted a memorandum in which the former British prime minister told his cabinet that the Americans had shown no clear conception of the military operations which he said they had proposed in the Indochina war.

SEND PLANES

Eden said in his first installment of his memoirs that Dulles planned to intervene with planes in the Indochina war six years ago and that Britain's refusal to go along prevented the intervention and probably stopped a third world war.

B.C. Wages Still High

OTTAWA (CP)—Average weekly wages and salaries in Canadian industry amounted to $74.67 in October, compared with $82.03 in B.C. and $71.13 in October, 1958.

MOSCOW (AP)—Russian steps to promote Premier Khrushchev's total world disarmament plan are expected to be announced soon.

A unilateral program—perhaps a reduction in Soviet armed forces—may be voted into effect by the Supreme Soviet at a session opening today.

GENEVA (UPI)—The United States said yesterday it can not sign a treaty to outlaw all nuclear tests until agreement is reached on how to detect underground shots.

Garden for Campus?

Horticulturist Attilio Randy says B.C.'s forest industry would increase its donations to the Victoria University building fund if it was known part of the money would go into a botanical garden on the campus.

ment of Canada's first botanical garden at the new university with campaign chairman R. M. Wilson.

"No place is more suited to a botanical garden than southern Vancouver Island," said Mr. Randy. "Here we have the best climatic condition in all Canada."

"Many plants could be grown here. Scientists from the university could conduct experiments, students could participate in the development."

Mr. Randy will take his schema before members of the Victoria University Council.

Late Rally Stops Slump At Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A late rally by industrials brought the stock market out of the doldrums amid moderately heavy trading.

Eddy Paper led industrial leaders with a 5 1/2 point gain at 67 on a small turnover. Ford Motor was ahead 1 1/2 at 83 1/2, while Ford Motor of Canada, Interprovincial Paper Line, Consolidated Paper, and International Utilities all gained one point.

General Motors led losers with a 1 1/2 drop at 48 1/2. Moore Corp. was down 1 1/2 at 40 1/2. Consolidated Denison was down 1 1/2 at 10 1/2 and Sunbeam gained 1 1/2 at 10 1/2.

Western oils slipped lower, Calgary and Edmonton were off 1/2 at 19 1/2 and Home Oil A lost 1/2 at 13 1/2.

Base Metals Drop

MONTREAL (CP) — Activity and prices showed a slight upward trend at the end of a mainly quiet day.

In papers, Abitibi moved up 1/2 at 39 1/2 while quarter-point losses were recorded by Fraser at 26 1/2, Great Lakes at 41, Powell River at 17 1/2 and Price at 43 1/2.

Base metals continued to show price drops, International Nickel dropped 1 1/2 at 100 1/2, and Noranda 1/2 at 100 1/2.

Three utilities reported quarter-point losses — B.C. Power at 36 1/2, Nat'l Gas at 35 1/2 and Quebec Natural Gas at 17 1/2. Shawinigan moved up 1/2 at 29 1/2.

Trans-Canada was down 1/2 at 24 and Trans Mountain 1/2 at 10 1/2 in the pipelines group. CPR was down 1/2 at 24 1/2 and General Dynamics lost 1/2 at 47 1/2.

Gains Erased

NEW YORK (AP) — A feeble rally faded and the stock market took its sixth daily loss in a row. Blue chips dropped from fractions to 2 or 3 points.

The market on average had erased virtually all of December's gains. Utilities, though irregular, were up a bit on average, a sign of a shift of investment money into a safer type of security.

Placer Makes Gain

VANCOUVER — Industrials lost ground in moderate trading. Mac-Powell was 1 1/2, and Westminster Paper 3 1/2, each recording a 1/2 loss on the day.

Also lower were Woodward's at $19, Trans-Mountain at $10 1/2, Canadian Collieries at $7 1/2, and Growers Wine A at $7 1/2.

Placer Development at $11 was up 1/2 and was the strong spot in mines. Sheep Creek also rose at 100, but most other active issues were lower.

Dividends Declared

Cool Bargain-Day Thief Walks Out with $2,000

LONDON (AP)—A few hours after Harrod's department store opened its January sale, a polite young man picked his way through a crush of bargain hunters, smiled to the girl cashier in the woollen goods department, opened a sack and said: "Empty it in here please, miss."

The girl, briefed on special arrangements for a collector to empty the till from time to time, poured in about £800 ($2,136).

"Thank you," murmured the young man. He strolled away with the sackful of cash. Scotland Yard is looking for him.

Huge Socred Majority Plans Own Opposition

By DONALD SMITH
EDMONTON (TNS)—When the Alberta legislature opens next month the four lone opposition members will have every right to feel like those ancient Christians looking down the lion's mouth in the Roman amphitheatre.

Last June's provincial general election reduced the opposition side to its lowest ebb since 1943—a Liberal, a Conservative, a Coalition member and an Independent Socred.

The Social Credit party plans to attenuate the inevitable result of debates and voting—a flattened opposition—by allowing the opposition to hear some of the Socred MLAs' criticisms of government legislation which normally would be confined to the cloistered party caucus.

"Not that we plan to usurp the functions of the opposition," Fred Colborne, minister without portfolio and cabinet handyman, hastens to explain. "We felt that, because we have so many members and because it is considered advisable to have full public discussion of legislative measures, we could help to produce this in the legislature by having our members make a specialty of a certain field of administration."

The Socred members will be organized into committees charged with studying various aspects of government. The hope of party officials is that the backbencher, instead of sitting back silently and opening his mouth only to say "aye" and "nay" at the proper times, will lead the debates in caucus and the House.

"The backbenchers will feel free to oppose a government measure, or at least cast doubt on it," Colborne says. "There'll not be the crying need to put up a solid front as when there is a good-size opposition."

HELPFUL

The Social Crediters think the committee system will evolve and prove valuable in many ways yet to be found. While they don't intend to make them public, in the sense of having persons coming to them for specific things, party officials feel the groups might help in channelling complaints, suggestions and inquiries to the right departments and persons.

Crime Czars Jailed Apalachin Sequel

NEW YORK (AP)—Nineteen delegates to the Apalachin underworld convention were sentenced Wednesday to prison terms of up to five years.

A 20th defendant was absent because bad weather grounded a plane bringing him here.

U.S. District Judge Irving R. Kaufman said a list of the defendants "read like a tale of horrors."

The men were charged with conspiring to obstruct justice by lying about the purpose of the upstate crime conclave in 1957.

Fourteen of the men were sentenced to the maximum of five years. Ten of the 14 also were fined the maximum of $10,000.

Four others were sentenced to four years, including John C. Montana, former Buffalo, N.Y., city councilman and that city's "man of the year" in 1956. One delegate was sentenced to three years.

The government never established what brought the men together, but Kaufman left no doubt about his own conclusions.

"All the defendants have cloaked themselves with outwardly legitimate businesses, and civic and charitable activities, but it is quite clear that these have been fronts . . . for their nefarious activities," he said.

Auditorium

Nothing Fancy— Scurrah

Mayor Percy Scurrah came out this week for utility and economy rather than anything fancy in a civic auditorium.

Premier Bennett said recently that provincial aid in building an auditorium will be in proportion to the imagination used in designing it.

In seeming contrast, Mayor Scurrah said in an address to the Kiwanis Club that "we ought to keep our feet on the ground," and not go in for something very large, very beautiful and very costly.

"Let's build one we can afford—a good utility building to house small and medium-size conventions," he said.

He foresaw no difficulty in financing such a building if Greater Victoria municipalities will contribute amounts annually equal to half a mill of taxation.

Slump Seen In '62

'Work, Save' Economist Advises

OTTAWA (Special) — The present boom will continue in 1960 and 1961, with the possibility of a sharp recession in 1962, outstanding Canadian government economist Dr. O. J. Firestone of the department of trade and commerce has forecast.

The recession in 1962 could be more severe than anything experienced in the 1940s or 1950s. Prompt and vigorous government action would be required to combat it.

DATE CHANGED?

The present government at Ottawa, under ordinary circumstances, would hold the next general election in 1962. But if Dr. Firestone's predictions of a severe recession that year are accurate, the government might well go to the country in 1961 or wait until 1963.

Finance Minister Donald Fleming, in a recent Toronto address, sounded a warning to Canadians that while the future for the economy in the 60s appeared bright there is "lurking dangers" of continued booms and busts.

MANY REASONS

The recessions could be brought on by a combination of circumstances, including inflation with its rising costs and mounting competition from European and Russian trading blocs.

Mr. Fleming said he had a simple message for Canadians: "Work and save."

Dr. Firestone, the economic adviser to the trade and commerce department, said: "Because of the slower rate of growth in the first half of the 1960s the recession in that period may be more severe than any we had in the postwar period or any we may encounter in the latter part of the 1960s."

STILL SAME

He made the forecast while speaking to the Canadian Association of advertising agencies recently. The address received little publicity. Dr. Firestone told the Colonist this week that he still held the same opinions.

His predictions have attracted attention in the business world where his forecast of a possible severe depression in 1962 has caused concern.

OPTIMISTIC

Dr. Firestone, looking ahead over the next two decades, expressed long-run optimism for Canada's economy.

"I am somewhat more optimistic about the latter part of the 1960s and into the 1970s than for the early 1960s. Looking ahead to the immediate future, we can see a fair rate of increase in economic activity for 1960 and 1961."

IN UPSWING

"We have had a recession from 1957 to 1958. We're now in an upswing phase of the business cycle. In the postwar period, the upswing phases of the business cycle has varied between 33 months and 44 months. It is therefore quite possible that we will reach a peak of economic activity in 1961, with some decline in economic activity as we go into 1962," he predicted.

WISE ACTION

"One of the lessons we may have learned is that we can influence the pattern of the business cycle in a private enterprise economy through wise action on the part of business, labor, farmers and governments, but that we cannot control the business cycle."

"The recession we may be facing in 1962 could be more extensive than anything we have yet experienced since the end of the Second World War," he said, "and it may require quite vigorous action to reduce both its extent in terms of length of time and severity of the economic downturn."

Here in North America, he said, we may be drawing closer towards a continental approach in resolving our common problems. This may prove to be an effective arrangement in the fields of defence and development of raw materials and energy sources.

BEHIND THE GLASS

By Jim Tang

Curlers have long prided themselves on the good-fellowship which abounds in their game, they feel, more than in any other. This certainly has been at least close to the truth. The game had social beginnings and down through the years has established a tradition of good-fellowship which has, for the most part, stood up in the face of a tremendous growth and the problems caused by ever-increasing competitiveness.

But there are times when the old concepts are forgotten, and one need only recall the behaviour of some watchers during Consols playoff games at the Victoria Curling Club this week.

They weren't there to pull for a favorite but to pull down someone they wanted someone else to beat for them. They cheered misses, gloated over bad breaks and, on occasion, vented uncharacteristically high personal remarks, either obvious or not caring that watchers—and listeners, too—included the wives of those who were in their disfavor.

One expects a maximum of second-guessing from behind-the-glass skips and criticism of strategy, and even form, is almost as much a part of the game as a draw. Nor is there any reason why watchers shouldn't have a preference as to which rink they'd like to see win. But criticism of play and second-guessing is one thing, rank bias based on personalities or caused by jealousies and loudly expressed during play regardless of who is listening is another. It's not called good-fellowship.

TIGHTENING NEEDED: It is obvious, following play-downs here, that there should be some tightening in the rules which govern Consols play.

During play at the club level, several substitutions were permitted although it had been agreed that rinks which entered would have to go the whole way with the four players who started the first game. And after club representatives were declared, one rink changed its order of play and another substituted with a player from a rink which had been eliminated only after a special playoff.

As far as is apparently known, neither rink broke any rules and no blame should be attached to any skip, but the changes have virtually made a farce of the play-downs.

The way things are now, it appears that there is no rule which would prevent a Victoria rink from selecting Tony Gutowski as a substitute and then changing the order of play to permit him to skip in the semi-finals and final after he was eliminated at the club level.

To prevent this sort of thing there should be a rule barring as a substitute, at least until the zone winner has been declared, any curler who has taken part in the play-downs for another rink. And as zone Consols play-downs are in actuality the same event from the club level through the zone final, rinks should be forced to retain the same order of play throughout. Also, as the substitution which was made for the semi-finals was necessitated by the inability of a student curler to continue beyond the club level, student curlers should be barred from Consols play at any level.

That's only a start but it must be evident to everyone now that there will have to be some hard and fast rules governing zone play-offs.

WHO'LL IT BE? Meanwhile, despite the faults outlined above, there is more interest than ever in the zone play-offs and considerable guessing as to who will eventually represent Vancouver Island in the B.C. final.

With Tony Gutowski out of things, the logical assumption is that this will be the year Glen Harper makes it. The Duncan skip has been knocking at the door for several years but the Victoria Ice-maker has always blocked his way in the past. A few have ventured the opinion that Harper's rink is not as potent as it was and that improved competition makes it a wide-open affair. They could be right but he is at least entitled to Gutowski's mantle as the man to beat until final results are in.

Looming as strong candidates in this guess, are Don MacRae of Nanaimo, Harry Strizaker of Port Alberni and the Victoria rink, or rinks, which reach the Island final.

And it's another guess as to which Victoria rink, or rinks, will get to the final. Harper is practically a clinch to win one of the South Island's three spots and it's likely that Victoria rinks will grab the other two although Duncan's Shorty Berkey has proved tougher than many expected and still has to be rated a chance.

Gar Taylor's steady rink is in a favored position with three straight wins but to meet Harper and Steve Hayhurst in its last two semi-final games and could conceivably lose both. If it does, a three-rink playoff for the last two South Island berths is almost probable. Hayhurst could also end up 3-2 by defeating Berkey as well as Taylor and Larry Marshall can get into it by besting Berkey and Gordie Moore in his last two games.

To make a guess, we'll take Harper, Taylor and either Hayhurst or Marshall as South Island finalists, Harper to win the zone final with MacRae as runner-up and Taylor and/or Strizaker as strong challengers.

Elmer Hoffman Rink Wins in Edinburgh

EDINBURGH—The touring Canadian curlers ended their short visit to Edinburgh Wednesday night with a resounding 9-6-41 win over a Peebles and East Lothian province team at the Haymarket ice rink.

Every Canadian rink, including one skipped by Victoria curler Hoffman, won its match. The most convincing victory was that posted by Montreal skip Hal Clarke whose rink beat W. M. Sime's crew, 22-4.

Hoffman's rink defeated P. Smith, 15-9.

The tourists left later for Ayr where they play the second of seven test matches next Monday. Earlier Wednesday, the Canadians were beaten, 83-47, by a team representing Biggar and Clydesdale. See details, Page 14.

VIC SOCCER WIN
Victoria High School senior soccer team defeated Oak Bay High School, 3-1, in an exhibition game at Victoria Wednesday.

Watson Looks to Europe

Canada's Hockey 'Wells' Dry?

NEW YORK (AP)—Can you imagine a four-Russian playing right wing for New York Rangers or a broad-beamed Czech guarding the goal for Boston Bruins? It's not unlikely in the next decade, says Phil Watson, former coach and now chief talent-seeker for the National Hockey League Rangers.

Figuring Europe may be a

Trotters Clown Way To Mirthful Victory

Basketball at an enlightening level was served last night at Central Junior High gymnasium where a capacity crowd of approximately 850 enjoyed every minute as the Harlem Globe Trotters went through their zany antics.

Opening a two-night stand here, the fabled Globe Trotters did a lot of clowning and played serious basketball only in spurts. Nevertheless, Abe Saperstein's comedians had little trouble in scoring a 68-63 win over the San Francisco All-Nations team.

Another full house is expected tonight when the Globe Trotters and their travelling companions conclude the local series.

everything to the enthusiastic crowd.

As usual, eight-year Trotter veteran J. C. Gipson held the spotlight with his continuous clowning. Gipson was easily the game's outstanding player in addition to his clowning, scoring eight of his team's first 10 points and finishing with 38 points—high for the night.

Then there was Don Barnett who captivated the crowd with dribbling ability. Also playing-coach Ernie Robinson and Jackie Fitzpatrick who both starred.

Globe Trotters opened fast to grab a 17-14 lead after the first quarter and were in front 38-28 at the half. They played a little serious ball in the third quarter and, aided by fine outside shooting by Barnett and bucket-work by Gipson, led 54-45 entering the final quarter.

Top scorer for the losers was Ron Holt who tossed in 22 points. Probably the most effective for the losers was six foot, 10 inch, centre Jerry Lester who finished with 20 points.

Trotters—J. C. Gipson 38, Willis Thomas 4, Jackie Fitzpatrick 4, E. Robinson 4, Don Barnett 12, Ernie Robinson 12.

All-Nations—Ken Bryan 8, Jerry Lester 20, Ron Holt 22, Reynold Freitas 15, Bob Steiner, Taddy Song, Bob Akers. Total 63.

The aroused Boston Celtics, playing the second half without Bob Cousy and Bill Russell, crushed St. Louis, 134-112. Wednesday night to maintain a 2½ game lead in the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division.

Philadelphia, the Celtic's challengers in the division, nipped Syracuse, 132-131, in the opener of the Boston Garden doubleheader, witnessed by 12,187 fans.

That thriller was settled by Ernie Beck's baseline shot six seconds later in overtime. It was the 10th straight victory for the Warriors.

Wilt Chamberlain, fabulous Warrior rookie who registered 42 points, sent the contest into an added five-minute stretch by connecting on a pair of free throws with 13 seconds remaining in regulation.

In Fort Wayne, Ind., Detroit Pistons came back to their old home town Wednesday night and shaded New York Knickerbockers, 114-113, to end a five-game losing streak.

"Europe, on the other hand, has plenty of empty stomachs. It wouldn't be hard to get good athletes interested in a few American dollars. In 10 years Europe may be our major source of supply."

"I saw a big Russian with the Soviet team that visited here a year ago. I didn't get his name but he looked pretty good to me. This time I'll get both names and addresses."

Coach Laycoe Grounded But Cougars Win, 5-2

SPOKANE — Hal Laycoe, manager-coach of the Victoria Cougars, sweated it out as never before last night—but not at Spokane, where his club improved, its Western Hockey League playoff chances with a 5-2 decision over the Comets.

But Roy McBride, who is now coach as well as manager of the Comets, made it. And therein hangs a tale.

McBride, Laycoe, winger Al Johnson of the Comets and forwards Art Jones, Gordie Fashoway and Artie Schmutz of the Cougars were all in Edmonton Tuesday night for the annual all-star game. McBride had his car and undertook to drive the four players back to Spokane while Laycoe had to rely on air travel. He didn't make it but McBride, probably to his sorrow, did.

With Laycoe fretting and fuming somewhere between Edmonton and Spokane, trainer Berlyn Hodges and Fashoway shared the coaching duties for the Cougars and came out on top over McBride, who returned to his old dual job for the first time this season.

Laycoe, however, is expected to reach here before his club's next game, against the Comets on Saturday. McBride and his charges will leave Thursday for Vancouver and a Friday night game against Canucks and then return, probably by car, for Saturday night's fixture.

Goals only 24 seconds apart in the second period won it for the Victoria club. Doug Macauley, cashing the rebound after Emile Francis had made a fine stop on a shot by Anderson, had given the Cougars a 1-0 lead in the first period and Ron Attwell, also grabbing a rebound, had pulled the Comets even at 5:55 of the second period.

THROUGH MAZE
Less than a minute and a half later, Ron Matthews put Victoria ahead with a blue-line shot which found its way through a maze of players. Then the Cougars struck again from the ensuing face-off, burly Don Blackburn barreling in to plunk a loose puck past Francis.

Eddie Stankiewicz got Comets back in the game midway through the period but Fashoway counted the insurance goal in the last minute, combining with linemates Jones and Schmutz for the prettiest effort of the evening.

Anderson drilled the puck into an empty net only 22 seconds from time to end the scoring.

Anderson and Macauley led the Cougars with a goal and two assists each while Blackburn, who played most of the game on a line with Anderson, who shifted back to centre, and Macauley, had an assist in addition to his goal.

Bring Back Warwick

Our Team
In Mess

By HAL WALKER

TORONTO — Somebody had to bring the story out in the open, and it remained for Cliff Pennington, a youngster who ranks high in the future book of Montreal Canadiens to tell us that our Olympic hockey team is in a sorry state of disrepair.

What Pennington is saying is that the Russians, the Swedes and the Czechs will finish higher than our national hockey team in the Winter Olympics in Squaw Valley next month, which is the equivalent of saying we Canadians had better get prepared to accept another Cortina.

If there is as much substance to his story as he says, it is certainly time that George Dudley, the father confessor of Canadian amateur hockey and its best counselor, step in and straighten out what appears to be a mess. "Horrible mess," Pennington was quoted as saying. Unquestionably Dudley, who moves quickly when the need arises, will be searching out the situation today.

The former Flin Flon junior star was critical of the team coaching, but by OHA standards this doesn't add because the Kitchener-Waterloo team has won six of its last seven games since Bill Durnan voluntarily resigned. Bobby Bauer, one of the club's officers, took over when several candidates rejected the job.

Bauer Didn't Want Job

This is a job that Bauer, by his own admission, doesn't want. Bob was coach of the K.W.s in their disastrous last Olympics in 1956 in Italy. He is still haunted by the nightmare of that trip. But with nobody else to take over, he felt morally obligated to his fellow executives to help.

In 19 days the Dutchmen will embark on a tour of Western Canada, trek southward to California for the Olympics. Of a certainty there must be trouble in the ranks. Smoke usually brings fire and there was smoke when Bill Durnan, who had been looking forward to coaching in the Olympics, unloaded his job as coach. Unhappy, very unhappy, too. But Bill isn't saying anything yet.

There are those who profess to believe that it is not a national calamity if Canada loses the world hockey title. But those people certainly aren't obeying their instincts as people with pride in their country. Remember the stunning shock wave that enveloped us when Toronto Lyndhursts (not a strong team to be sure, but representing Canada, nevertheless) were trounced by the Russians?

Let's Not Kid Ourselves

And when the broadcast came through from Cortina and Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen had lost an Olympic title to the Russians didn't that throw his shoe at the mantle radio in disgust? Let's not kid ourselves, we're proud of our hockey and of our hockey teams. Let us not wait until the first week of February to do something we're going to be sorry for about the 25th day of February.

This corner doesn't pretend to know what ails the Dutchmen. But the notion is here that unless Canadian hockey is to get another kick in its pants from the comrades somebody better get on the blower today and invite Grant "Knobby" Warwick, the old warhorse, to take over complete charge of Canada's 1960 Olympic team.

Knobby has dealt with the Russians before. He knows what they don't like. He's the fighting type of guy they need leading the charge. It won't be any pink tea party at Squaw Valley, so let's take off the gloves and get the job done.

Lead night's scores: Detroit 2, Chicago 3. Next games tonight: Toronto at Montreal, New York at Boston.

season Wednesday night to help the Chicago Black Hawks to a 5-2 win over the Detroit Red Wings despite a record-tying goal by veteran forward Gordie Howe.

Hull's score came with less than 11 minutes to play. He stole the puck from Billy McNeill near the Detroit blue line and stick-handled into the clear near the net where he feinted goalie Terry Sawchuk out of position to score unassisted.

Hull's contract specified that he would receive a bonus for 25 goals. The tally left him one point behind Boston's Bronco Horvath in the league scoring race. Hull has 26 assists for a 51 point total.

TIES RICHARD

Howe tipped in a shot by Marcel Pronovost for his 436th national league goal to give him a point total of 945, tying the record now held by Maurice Richard of Montreal.

Howe, in his 16th season in the league, has 509 assists and reached the 945 total in 887 games. Richard, who has been injured and who was expected to return to the ice tonight, is playing in his 18th season and has appeared in 948 league games. Points scored in playoff games do not count in the totals.

TWO FOR SLOAN

Howe's goal was wasted as it came after a three-goal spurge in five minutes and five seconds of the second period by the Black Hawks. Bill Hay scored once and Ted Sloan then tallied twice, his 202nd and 203rd National League goals, in 33 seconds.

Ed Litzenberger got the first Chicago score and Brian Smith scored first for Detroit, his first National League goal.

It was Chicago's second win in nine games with Detroit this season, and the defeat left the Wings in third place. The Black Hawks moved within half a game of fourth place.

MONTREAL (UPI)—Montreal Canadiens' coach Toe Blake said Wednesday the return to action of Maurice (Rocket) Richard would cause a reshuffling of three of his four forward lines.

The 38-year-old Montreal captain will be reunited with brother Henri and left winger Dickie Moore, the same unit which started the season. Jean Beliveau will centre a line between Bernie Geoffrion and Marcel Bonin, and Ralph Backstrom will pivot a line with Donnie Marshall on the right side and Ab McDonald on the left wing.

The Phil Goyette, Andre Pronovost, Claude Provost unit will remain the same, Blake said.

Right winger Billy Hicke, sidelined with bruised ribs, will not play.

The Canadiens meet the second-place Toronto Maple Leafs here tonight.

CONFIDENTIALLY YOURS
 —by Byrne Hope Sanders

MONTREAL, Jan. 14th—No coaxing needed to get your youngsters to eat these favourite vegetables... AYLMER FANCY PEAS—ASSORTED SIZES. They are sure to be a favourite dish with all the family. So look for them in the bright, white tins and take them home for a family treat. Everyone will agree they're perfectly delicious. That's because they're grown on specially selected Canadian farms where sunshine, moisture, and soil are ideal. Then, at exactly the right moment of growth, they're harvested and rushed to nearby canneries, where they are sealed and cooked, often within the hour. Result: Aylmer Fancy Peas are the best you've ever tasted.

AT LAST!... HERE IS THE PERFECT ANSWER to the problem of how to have pure, delicious cream always on hand—ready to use in all kinds of cream recipes. Unopened, this fine country cream keeps its fresh quality indefinitely right on your cupboard shelf. And after the tin is opened, NESTLE'S PURE THICK CREAM stays fresh in the refrigerator as long as dairy cream. Nestle's Cream is perfect for dessert toppings, casserole dishes, in fact, for any recipe calling for the smooth richness and flavour of cream. That's because Nestle's Pure Thick Cream is exactly that... pure, thick, country cream. You'll agree, I'm sure, that this is the new, easy way to have delicious cream on hand whenever you need it.

HOORAY FOR A NEW DECADE! And hooray, too, for cheery family breakfasts, with everyone on tip-toe to be out and about the day's work. That's the way they'll feel with a breakfast of piping hot RED RIVER CEREAL. It's really good for old, young and middle-aged. All of us enjoy its nutty, wholesome blend of cracked wheat, rye and flax—as delicious as it's nourishing. Youngsters and active workers benefit from the energy values in Red River. For older folks, or sedentary workers, Red River is an excellent guard for regularity. Easy to prepare; cooks in a few minutes. Costs so little too... Your family deserves Red River!

HAPPY THOUGHT FOR A BRAND NEW YEAR!... your youngsters will love and thrive on this truly healthful treat that tastes like candy... new Wampole VITA-POPS. Yes, wild-cherry flavoured Vita-Pops look and taste like candy yet they're really vitamins. They contain precious vitamins A, C, D, and B12, the vitamins so essential for sound growth and good health. Wise mothers make sure their children get their vitamin requirements by giving them just one Vita-Pop a day. I recommend a five weeks' supply of Vita-Pops at $2.50, or if you have several children—a fifteen weeks' supply at only $5.95.

A POPULAR PRODUCT is a little like a popular woman... it never sits on the shelf. Well, the popular product I'm thinking of is MIRACLE WHIP. It is bought enthusiastically from your grocer's shelves, and I'm sure it won't sit around in your cupboard at home! You see, the flavour of Miracle Whip is unique. It enhances other good flavours—without overwhelming them! Ask for the large, 32-ounce jar of Miracle Whip—the most popular size for convenience and economy and remember any portion of the Contest, $10,000 First Prize! Get the full details from your food store now!

HERE'S SOME TAIL-WAGGING NEWS FOR YOUR DOG!... a brand new idea in dog nourishment. Dr. Ballard's BURGERBITS Dog Food is the new, full-course meal for meat-loving dogs. Dr. Ballard's Burgerbits Dog Food has 19 choice, balanced ingredients in crunchy, munched chunks that your pup will love to chew. With liquid, or alone, it gives your dog all the food benefits and eating satisfaction he needs. It actually beats meat for nourishment... has twice the value of prime beef at half the cost! Yes, Dr. Ballard's Burgerbits Dog Food is a dog's full-course meal with appetite appeal PLUS.

A GOOD CHEF'S TRICKS, when once explained, are usually easy enough for all of us to follow. One trick, which I've learned, is the imaginative use of pungent MAGGI Chicken Bouillon Cubes. They make delicious snack and bed-time drinks of course (only 4 calories per serving, too)—but there's so much more you can do with them! For instance, if you always include Maggi Bouillon Cubes in your casserole recipes; in your stews, soups and gravies you will find they take on a subtle, gourmet flavour. Your family and guests will applaud! Look for the yellow and red Maggi Chicken Bouillon package... do!

BEAUTIFUL! Look at your enticing appetizer tray—ready for the party. The stars are AYLMER Gherkins—with that sunshine-fresh flavour we enjoy so much. Aylmer Gherkins can be used in so many ways! Cut them in two, cross-wise. Into each cut surface insert a whole blanched almond—and use for garnish. Make Gherkin Dolls to surround a chicken salad—with a small Gherkin for the body, a small pickled onion for the head, and four small Gherkins for arms and legs—put together with toothpicks. One of the famous Aylmer family of pickles which clever hostesses use all the time.

THIS IS THE MONTH TO RESOLVE to stop worrying about money problems and to do something about them. A few years ago, I made a solemn resolution to get my finances into better shape. The first thing I did was open a Personal Chequing Account at the BANK OF MONTREAL for paying bills and to help me keep track of my household expenses. Then I opened a B of M Savings Account, and I've found it the ideal place to "discipline" those few extra dollars! If you are resolved to control your expenses in '60—I can think of no better way than to open a Personal Chequing Account—strictly for spending... and a Savings Account—strictly for saving... at "MY BANK".

THE VOICE OF TRUTH is a kindly one. I hear it in letters from men and women in every province who have found longed-for relief from neuritic, arthritic or rheumatic pain through taking TEMPLETON'S TRC's. I find that each of these writers is eager to pass on word to others who are suffering now—telling true stories of freedom from past agony. A worker who can resume his wage-earning; a mother who can care for her children properly again; a daughter who sees her father freed from misery—all say, "We've been helped by TRC's. Do listen to this voice of experience and get TRC's from your drug store without delay."

Plants Worse Than Milk In Strontium 90 Count

SASKATOON (CP) — Dr. D. L. Gibson, head of the University of Saskatchewan dairy science department, said Tuesday plants consumed by humans and animals contained 17 times as much radioactive strontium 90 as milk.

During a panel discussion at the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Agricultural Graduates Association, he said milk had received unjustified adverse publicity in this respect.

Dr. Gibson said the strontium 90 content of plants, animals and humans had increased due to radioactive fall-

Nature of Man Subject of Talk

Mrs. Josephine Adams will read an address on "The Sevenfold Nature of Man," at a public meeting sponsored by the Theosophical Society, Besant Lodge, at 7:45 p.m. Sunday in the lodge room, Room 113, 745 Yates Street.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The case of Prince Nina Khan's fading black pearl necklace is the talk of the town.

A society columnist reported Dec. 23 that "an American jeweler of excellent reputation" had refunded about $500,000 to a client because a black pearl necklace and its canary diamond clasp turned out to be artificially colored. The jeweler was not identified.

The client has since been identified as Prince Sadruddin Khan, uncle of the young Aga Khan. Prince Sadruddin bought the necklace for his wife, the former Nina Dyer Thyssen.

Tiffany's, the bellwether of American jewelers, ran an advertisement in the New York Times Jan. 1 saying it was not the jeweler mentioned by the columnist.

Tuesday, Van Cleef & Arpels and Cartier Inc., jewelry firms with stores on Fifth Avenue, ran identical ads in The Times that set tongues wagging from the diamond marts of the Bowery to the purlieus of Park Avenue.

The firms said they found it "necessary as intensionally-known jewelers to assure their patrons and friends that we are not the jewelry concern in question."

A spokesman for Black Starr & Gorman, another leading Fifth Avenue firm, said it was considering running a similar denial in The Times today.

Sprats are smaller members of the herring species, found in British and Norwegian waters.

Chan Plans Libel Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chinese Lawyer Harry Fan filed notice Wednesday that he will apply in Supreme Court here today for leave to issue a writ against Immigration Minister Ellen Fairclough.

Mr. Fan, counsel for deportation dodger Weidon Chan, filed an affidavit stating he believes Chan has a good cause of action against Mrs. Fairclough for libel.

Quadruplet Mo Must Go, His Chest's Too Narrow

LONDON (Reuters) — Calf quadruplets born a year ago on a farm near here face separation because the male member of the quartet is not up to breeding standard and has been ordered killed.

The order was issued by officials who said the bull calf's chest is too narrow.

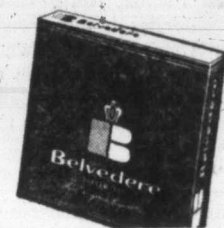

The calves, belonging to Maj. John Wills, are Eerie, Meenie, Minnie and Mo. "Mo" is the bull.

"It seems a lot of nonsense to me," Wills said. "Mo is a fine little fellow, a real cheeky chappie, and we are all very fond of him."

B.C.'s Alpine Guides Live with Memories

Faces of Canada—by Leon Kossar

This is the 26th in a series of articles profiling Canada's ethnic communities.

GOLDEN, B.C. (TNS)—The Kicking Horse River that arches its way around the Alpine home of Edward Feuz is a white ribbon of ice at this time of year, and hoarfrost sits heavy on the valley.

When Edward's boots cut into crisp morning snow to break the deafening silence of a mountain range at rest, the footsteps have all the impact of gunshots.

I crunched after him through newfallen snow to the summer cottage Edward built on one corner of his property, across a rustic bridge from his home.

For in this town, says one of the most famous mountaineers in Canada's Rockies, "mountain climbing is only a memory."

EDWARD FEUZ

Thrill of Height

Small and slender, with muscles like knots of iron, Edward often reminisces about the past, thumbs through well-worn scrapbooks and guest-books to relive the thrills of great heights, a strange and wonderful communion with nature at the top of the world.

Around him are his hunting trophies, elk heads, coils of guide ropes, ice-axes, the crampion ice-creepers, and the pitons—sharp-pointed pegs with rings in them that are driven into the cracks of mountains.

Golden, a town of 1,300 in a pocket between the Rocky Mountains and the Selkirk Range, was made famous by Canada's own community of Swiss mountain guides. They were brought over as a group at the turn of the century.

Built by CPR

The Swiss and their descendants are still here. A fair share of Golden's population is Swiss today, and a good number of them are named Feuz.

The Alpine-styled Swiss village built by the CPR as a home for its team of guides is still slung perilously from a mountain that rises at a dizzy angle right from Edward's front door.

"People are too comfortable today," complains Edward's "kid brother," 66-year-old Walter Feuz.

"Not only is the era of mount-

Chalets Rented

Walter manages the chalets today, renting them out on long-term arrangements. They were originally built as residences for Walter, his two brothers Edward and Ernest, and other guides brought out from such famous Swiss resorts as Interlaken and Grindelwald.

Except for the original Feuz trio, who recently retired after more than half a century of scampering up and down the mountainsides, none of their Swiss families, relatives, or friends in Golden climb professionally.

Nearby Banff still employs two or three Swiss guides, "but it's not like it used to be."

Edward, Ernest and Walter still enjoy hiking, and only recently gave up skiing. Ernest thinks nothing of walking from his home in Golden the seven miles up to Walter's chalet every day "just for a visit." Until recently he skied 14 miles every day.

Famous Climbers

Between them, the brothers made around 150 first ascents in the Banff, Field, Golden and Glacier areas. Movie stars, public figures, politicians, scientists were among the climbers who sought out the Feuz brothers as guides.

One of Edward's favorite memories is the ascent he made on Mt. Avalanche with Lord Minto, then Governor-General of Canada.

The friendships that are made in mountain-climbing last a lifetime, they say.

But the sons and daughters of the Swiss climbers haven't followed their parents' outdoor vocation.

War Cause Change

Slim-whiskered and stocky Ernest Feuz, Jr., said the boys in the family had once thought about mountain climbing as their life's work.

"But then the war came along, and ever since it seems there hasn't been the same interest."

Ernest, Jr., manages an electric appliance and radio store, named his son Edward after grandfather Edward, father of the trio of mountain climbers who "opened up the Rockies."

Other sons and in-laws are hotelmen, councillors, mechanics, employees of the highway department, town businessmen.

Remember Alps

Edward, Ernest and Walter still think back to their Swiss homeland every so often.

Walter still journeys to Banff every August to attend a Swiss National Day reunion.

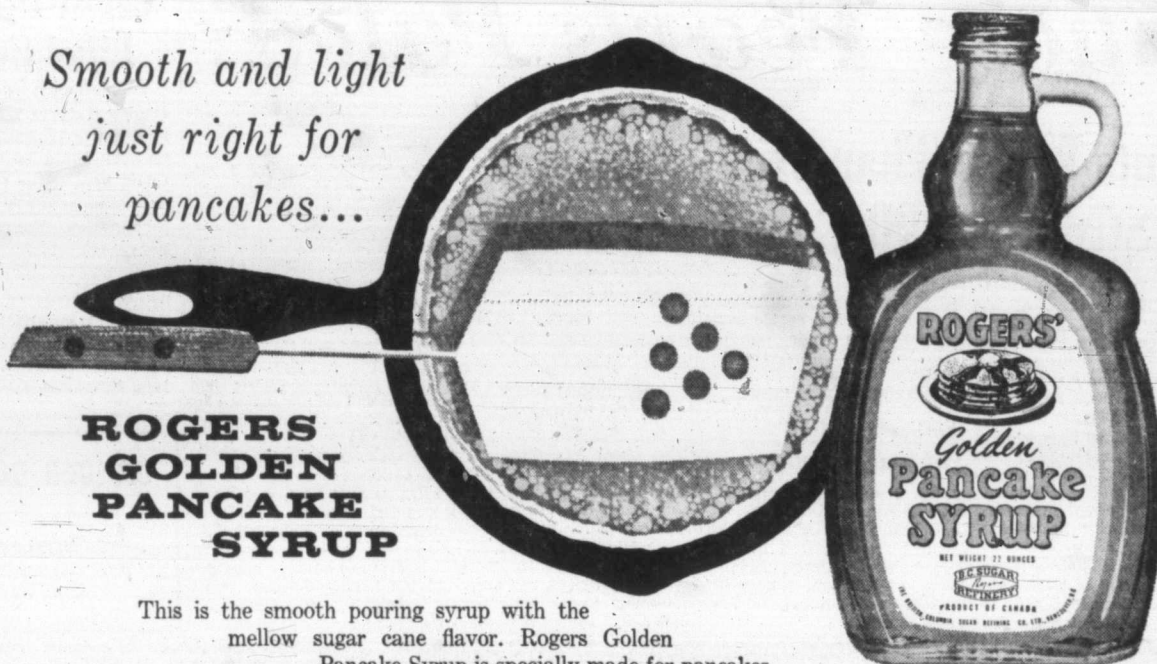

"I like to go on hikes in the mountains," says Ernest, Jr., "But not every weekend like my father and uncles."

"There won't be another generation like them," he says with a touch of pride.

Arms Bylaw Tightened

Central Saanich firearms bylaw will be re-worded to allow police greater leeway in enforcing it.

Municipal clerk D.S. Wood told Central Saanich council last night the present bylaw allows a rifle to be carried within the municipality. A charge of illegal hunting cannot be laid unless the firearm is seen to be discharged, he said, which "makes the law difficult to enforce."

Trade Issue Solved

PARIS (UPI)—Canada, the U.S. and the principal European trading nations agreed today to join an Atlantic economic community for closer aid and trade co-operation.

Agreement came at the 13-nation Economic Conference, which opened here Tuesday.

Initiative for the move came from the U.S. which presented to the meeting a plan to link Europe, the U.S. and Canada under a broad international organization to be set up after a close study by experts.

TWO POINTS

The conference agreed:

1—To set up a commission to co-ordinate a plan for joint Western aid to underdeveloped countries in an effort to meet the growing economic challenge from the Soviet Union.

Commission includes Canada, Britain, the U.S., France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Portugal and Common Market representatives.

2—To work for an Atlantic economic council which will harmonize Western trade policies.

Nations in the planning commission would align their loans and aid programs, in close co-operation with existing agencies such as the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, to make best use of each dollar and avoid duplication.

'Can't Tax Indians' Chief Says

MONTREAL (CP)—The Six Nations Iroquois Confederacy, in an open letter to Prime Minister Diefenbaker and President Eisenhower, has demanded tax exemptions for North American Indians.

The confederacy said Canadian and United States Indians with incomes outside their reserves should have a retroactive exemption from taxes at the federal, state and provincial levels.

At present an exemption covers only incomes earned within the reserves.

The letter, signed by chiefs of the confederacy, said North America's Indians "are not citizens of Canada or the U.S. and therefore cannot be taxed as such."

Tears Greet Trial Story

SASKATOON (CP)—Robert Yund slumped in tears at his murder trial Wednesday as testimony was read that his estranged wife Caroline had been about to go away with another man before her death.

Yund, 30, is charged with the shooting of his 35-year-old wife Oct. 13, Jake Friesen, 23, also died in the shooting in the Yund home.

Yund showed his first emotion since the trial began Monday when crown counsel Cal Tallis read a statement of testimony by Mrs. Carol Coutti, a former boarder at the Yund residence who now lives in B.C.

One sentence said Friesen loved Mrs. Yund "and was going to take her with him."

Gordon Gibson:

'Sommers, Gray Took the Rap For Others'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Former British Columbia forests minister Robert Sommers and timber executive H. W. Gray "took the rap for many" when they went to jail for bribery and conspiracy, lumberman Gordon Gibson charged Wednesday.

It was Mr. Gibson, former Liberal MLA, who touched off the investigation that resulted in their conviction with charges in the legislature that "money talks" in the issuance of forest management licences.

"It's not them that's wrong," he said. "It's our system. It's the fault of the public that would allow it."

In a bitter denunciation of the forest management system before the B.C. Truck Loggers' Association convention, Mr. Gibson attacked the provincial government, Premier Bennett, the big forest companies and foreign firms in the B.C. timber business.

Sommers and Gray are serving five-year penitentiary terms.

PRAISED FULTON

Mr. Gibson, who resigned his seat over the forest management issue and was defeated in a subsequent byelection, said he believed the case would never have come to light had it not been for Federal Justice Minister Fulton.

"They found the old files," he said. "They demanded action. Bob Sommers was arrested. You all know the rest. He was convicted."

"Again I say, how many more should have been? They should use Bob Sommers well. He was man enough. He didn't squeal."

Because of the case, he said, the government had to change the name of forest management licences because "it got the smell of jail with it."

"They changed it to tree farm licences. They are the same thing, only under another name. No other country in the world will tolerate them. Ninety-nine per cent of the people in B.C. will lose forever with forest management."

He said a continuation of the forest management system will mean the end of the small logger.

"The ones who should be on our side are against us," he said. "They are the over-

Williston Suggests:

Forest Tax Probe

VANCOUVER (CP)—Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston yesterday suggested a full investigation of the tax load on British Columbia's forest industry.

He admitted at the B.C. Truck Loggers' Association annual convention that the burden of federal and provincial taxes is heavy, but warned lumbermen it is up to them to study industrial efficiency and cost of production as well as the problems of marketing techniques and product development.

THE KEY

Their ability in meeting these problems should also come under investigation in the inquiry, he added.

"The key to this whole situation is whether the forest industry pays a disproportionate share of the total tax revenue collected in this province by both federal and provincial agencies," he said.

INVESTIGATION

Mr. Williston said he would be prepared to see an examination along these lines:

1. To determine the effect of the cumulative national-provincial forest tax load on the ability of the industry to compete in world markets.

2. To determine the effect of the cumulative tax load on investment required for proper economic development and maintenance of first-class facilities.

3. To consider what steps the industry itself is taking and prepared to take to cut production costs.

Mr. Williston did not discuss the form of the proposed inquiry.

Two Schools Wrecked

EVERETT, Wash. (AP)—Hoodlums wrecked desks, clocks, musical instruments and nearly everything else they could lay their hands on during an orgy of destruction in two grade schools south of here.

The sheriff's office said evidence indicated the destructive binge was the work of several teenagers, apparently using hatchets or crowbars.

ANTOINE PINAY
... worst crisis

De Gaulle Dispute Costs Pinay Post

PARIS (UPI)—President de Gaulle dropped veteran finance minister Antoine Pinay from the cabinet yesterday in a dispute over economic and foreign policy that threatened France's Fifth Republic with its worst political crisis.

Named immediately by de Gaulle to replace Pinay was a non-political financial expert, Wilfrid Baumgartner, 57-year-old governor of the Bank of France.

WITHOUT JOY

Baumgartner stressed he decided to take the job out of "simple duty" and "without any joy."

De Gaulle reluctantly parted company with Pinay, a former premier recognized as the chief architect of France's financial resurgence under the Gaullist regime.

In doing so, the president risked upsetting the economic and political stability he had achieved. Pinay is head of the powerful Independent (Conservative) party and strong elements within the party were threatening to take it into the opposition.

Pinay, whose Independents hold 118 seats in the 552-seat National Assembly, made it clear last night that he personally wanted no part of any revolt, which would cut so deeply into de Gaulle's majority that parliamentary instability would haunt France again.

He said he would "certainly not ask" his fellow Independents in the cabinet to resign.

Emergency Ended Officially

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters)—The British colonial government Tuesday ended a seven-year state of emergency in Kenya proclaimed at the height of Mau Mau terrorism in which more than 13,000 persons died.

The announcement came as Governor Sir Patrick Renison prepared to leave for London where he will attend constitutional talks aimed at giving Negroes a greater share in the colony's government.

The announcement said, however, that restrictions on Jomo (Burning Spear) Kenyatta, convicted Mau Mau leader who has been exiled to the remote northern section of the country, will continue.

We'll Fight to Stay in Victoria, Says TCA President

Trans-Canada Air Lines will fight "to the best of its ability" to keep its Vancouver-Victoria-Seattle service from being taken over by Pacific Western Airlines.

TCA's position was made clear yesterday by president Gordon McGregor in response to enquiries by The Daily Colonist.

Because of the time lapse between first announcement of PWA's interest in the service and the filing of its final application, Mr. McGregor said, TCA has proceeded with its long-range plan to modify Viscount aircraft for use on the Vancouver-Victoria-Seattle routes.

And this, he said, "together with other changes which have occurred indicates TCA's very definite interest in retaining its operations through Victoria.

"To be specific TCA has every intention of intervening at any hearing of the PWA application held by the Air Transport Board and will contest the application to the best of its ability."

Apart from monetary considerations, as the national carrier TCA feels it has an obligation to provide the best possible air service to Canadians, Mr. McGregor said.

"The company feels that the Vancouver-Victoria service should be served by a carrier with sufficient fleet capacity to be able to cope with extraordinary peaks in both cargo and passenger traffic inherent in the West Coast route. This is exemplified by what has occurred during protracted periods of interrupted surface transportation."

In view of runway and approach conditions at Patricia Bay, Mr. McGregor said, and other relevant factors, TCA "is not prepared at this time to make any commitments with transcontinental flights to Victoria. On the other hand, it would be economically impossible to justify such an operation unless the cost of maintaining personnel and facilities at both the airport and downtown reservations of office was supported by the continued operation of the Vancouver-Victoria and Vancouver-Seattle operations."

But Handful Go Along With Architect's Views

A lot of Victorians may be living in "cracker boxes," as a city architect charged yesterday, but a survey of homeowners last night showed a complete absence of wholesale remorse.

City Architect Roderick Clack said the average Canadian is determined to build a ranch-style house on a 60 by 120-foot lot in the country.

Most Victorians reached by the Colonist last night either resented the term "cracker box" as applied to their homes, or said they liked their cracker boxes just fine.

"I'm inclined to agree with the term," said Mrs. W. D. Anderson, 2136 Allenby, "but it seems you more or less have to conform. There doesn't seem much chance to vary the looks of your house—or the district. It will look much better when boulevard and other trees are grown."

Said Mrs. D. P. North, 1622 Richardson, who lives in the midst of what Mr. Clack would call a cracker box district,

'We Really Want Waterfront'

"We're trying to buy another house. I quite agree with the description. We really want a waterfront house, but when the time came we had to buy this one 'on spec.'"

"I don't like the idea of row-houses. (Mrs. North is from the Old Country, and familiar with these homes.) I think they're a retrograde step.

"However, most people can't afford architects to design their own homes, and these are the best compromise they can reach between their income and what they'd really like."

Mrs. H. T. Moore, 2981 Ashdowne, in the old Willows district, is another housewife who is very happy with her home.

It was not built by the Moores, but purchased when about two years old.

"We've been here a little more than three years," she said. "At first it was rather bare, but the trees and shrubs are growing, and the district's looks improving each year."

"We like it."

Willows District Singled Out

The Willows racetrack district was singled out by Mr. Clack as an example of the type of housing with "all the disadvantages and none of the advantages that single family dwellings should have."

H. J. O'Neill, 2720 Eastdowne, also in the Willows area, said new homes in Victoria, Oak Bay and parts of Saanich "are extremely original."

He said row housing was a wartime development and that portions of Esquimalt are prime examples of this.

"I think people in our district would object very strongly to the term 'cracker-box' as it might apply out here."

He said his own home was architect-designed and so were those of most of his neighbors.

A woman whose late father used to be a builder, Mrs. W. H. S. Mowat, 2978 Westdowne, another Willows resident, said house architecture seemed to improve sharply about four years ago.

"I certainly think the houses of today are far better," she said.

"But if I were to say what I guess some of the architects wouldn't be very flattered."

"I think they're nuts," said Mrs. D. G. Nightingale, 1330 Blue Ridge.

'Going Way Out on a Limb'

"They're going way out on a limb—when they say our houses today are like cracker boxes. I think there is a trend towards smaller lots, which is unfortunate. I believe we should stagger the placing of our houses on bigger lots."

She would not like living in a row house development where "everyone is one big happy family, living in each other's pockets."

D. W. C. Huggins, 1657 Richardson, said he doesn't agree if the term "cracker box" is meant to imply an unsound construction.

"But we are getting to be pretty uniform in appearance. Anyone coming home and not thinking too sharply might find himself overshooting his own house."

A good reason why "only the odd fellow goes out on a limb" is that the unconventional house is liable to have a lower resale value, he said.

He felt row housing developments would only lead to "another system of uniformity."

Ours Not Cracker Boxes

"I certainly don't think our houses are cracker boxes," said W. Lloyd Roberts, 1722 Albert.

There is a tendency towards "sameness" in houses, he said. "I like a bit of variety. As long as a house is 'rept in good condition no one should have anything to say about it."

"Location means a tremendous lot to any house," said Artillo Randy, 3318 Oak.

"A good garden is like the frame around a fine picture. We have some very beautiful houses, but we have some crazy ones, too, like modernistic art."

He would like to see housing developments planned around a communal recreation area.

Strong Winds Keep Firemen on Hop

Strong winds were blamed for fires that brought out the Oak Bay fire department three times within an hour last night. They doused chimney fires at 2362 Zela and 1078 Deal and a trash can fire between 6 and 7 p.m.

Effect Was Scenic

Winds Close Seafront But City Undamaged

Dog Killed, Two Hurt

One dog was killed and two others injured when they were struck by cars within a three-hour period on Saanich roads last night. Police said a dog was reported killed on the Patricia Bay Highway near Beaver Lake about 4:30 p.m. The other dogs were injured on Douglas near Quadra at 6:30 and on Gorge Road near Harriet at 7:10 p.m.

Strong winds yesterday sent many citizens chasing after their hats, but apparently caused little damage in the Victoria area.

Neither electrical nor telephone services were interrupted in any but the smallest degree, and the effect on the waterfront was more scenic than costly. Waves pounding over the Ross Bay sea wall forced closure of Dallas Road between Memorial and St. Charles.

Through most of the day, the weather office said, the wind blew fairly steadily at 40 miles an hour out of the east-southeast. Gusts whipped up as high as 63 miles an hour. Winds hit the whole B.C. coast, said weatherman William Mackie, but up north they were out of the west, and lighter.

Overlight, the wind was expected to drop and swing into the southwest, with an accompanying rise in temperature.

A resident of Cordova Bay, where a southeaster caused considerable damage last fall, said yesterday's blow made the view very attractive. Waves were breaking up before reaching the beach and all the boats are now high out of the water.

Oak Bay Boathouse reaped the benefit of the new, almost-complete breakwater, which so reduced the effect of wind on water that boats moored by the docks were barely moving.

Address to the immortal memory will be delivered by Rev. Harry Lennox of Kerrisdale Presbyterian Church in Vancouver.

Swartz Bay Road Plans

Letting of construction contracts for the new road between Sidney and the government ferry terminal at Swartz Bay is expected soon, a highways department spokesman said yesterday.

The road will turn north-west just north of Sandown, pass to the west of MacDonald Park and then curve northeast to the ferry wharf. Land purchases are almost complete, the official said.

The new road will replace the present twisting, narrow route.

92 Yesterday

A man who settled in the Northwest Territories in 1903, only to have the territory around him named Saskatchewan two years later, last night celebrated his 92nd birthday at his home at 941 McClure, where fellow residents staged a surprise party for him.

Thomas Blackburn was one of the Barr settlers who came to Canada from England just after the turn of the century. He moved to Victoria in 1947.

Mayor Confronts Airline Man

Opposition to Pacific Western Airlines taking over the service between Patricia Bay and the mainland was unanimously recommended yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce transportation group.

Today, city council is expected to oppose it too, for the same main reason: that being served by a local or regional carrier instead of a national carrier would be "a regressive step."

"NO SIR!"

Mayor Percy Scourrah, who spoke at the chamber group's meeting in favor of continued service by Trans-Canada Air Lines, said later that at council's meeting today "there may be some debate but I expect the results will be the same. I'm not changing my mind, no sir!"

The recommendation of the harbor and transportation group will be given to Chamber of Commerce directors for consideration.

It came after the group heard Harold Brandreth, PWA sales and traffic director, present his company's case and answer questions.

ANY QUESTIONS?

One of the "questions" was more of a statement, and it was from the mayor:

PWA's proposal, he said, would relegate Victoria to a feeder service permanently, because Canadian Pacific Airlines couldn't land its transcontinental Britannias at Patricia Bay without lengthening of the runways to 7,000 feet, and TCA couldn't be expected to keep Victoria facilities open for one or two transcontinental flights a day.

Also, he said, it looked to him as if PWA's proposed three 40-passenger Fairchild aircraft would be a minimum number—his understanding was that TCA would have five 60-passenger Viscounts. (He said later he wasn't talking through his hat about the Viscounts, and added that he had been speaking by telephone yesterday to TCA president Gordon McGregor.)

COMPETITION CITED

Mr. Brandreth, in answer, said that if the service was put in the regional category, there would be competition between the transcontinental carriers for Victoria business, and CPA would apply if TCA withdrew.

CPA, he indicated, would require suitable terminal facilities and runways, and "to get them you have to have a carrier who requires them, not one that is going to be satisfied with what you have."

Viscounts, he suggested, wouldn't fly beyond Vancouver—"In my opinion this is a feeder service and has been, and by the TCA plan will remain a feeder service, so it's not an issue."

PEAK POSSIBILITIES

Mr. Brandreth also maintained that PWA could handle peak loads experienced in the past by TCA, and said the airline would keep up with future demands.

Mayor Scourrah said he couldn't follow Mr. Brandreth's argument that having PWA service would improve Victoria's position regarding the airport facilities.

"Supposing PWA had it, and CPA said they'd like to come in for one or two flights a day, wouldn't the Air Transport Board say you're already served well?" he said.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My husband's sister-in-law has had four miscarriages in the past two years. They have three little girls. Every time Bess goes to the hospital the kids and their daddy move in with us.

They are with us now. Yesterday I asked my brother-in-law to go to the store and get two quarts of milk. He said "Fine. Where's the money?" I answered "Your kids drink milk, too. Pay for it yourself." He got red in the face, called me cheap and said he'd never ask a guest in his home to buy groceries.

When my husband got home from work he got a distorted version. When he accused me of not being gracious I almost blew up. His brother stood there and smirked.

When my husband and I were alone I told him next time Bess has a miscarriage his brother and the kids can go to his mother's house. He called me a hard-headed Dutchman. Let's have your opinion for the record—THE H.H.D.

Dear H.H.D.: There's more involved here than who pays for the milk. Your brother-in-law has shown himself to be not only petty but a trouble-maker.

Since you are the one who must cook, clean and care for the extra "guests" you should have the right to refuse if you feel put upon.

Widows Beware

Dear Ann: I read your column every day and get a big charge out of the lonesome widows who write and ask you where the eligible men are hiding. Here's a different slant for your column. It may make some of those lonesome widows feel better.

I was a widow, 50 years old and feeling sorry for myself. Along came a good-looking widower. I had a good job in a bank, owned my own home, drove a new car and had some blue chip stocks.

The widower phoned three times a day, met me for lunch, took me dining and dancing, and talked me into marrying him.

Now 12 months later, he owes me $3,000. His new business venture is headed for the rocks. My maid cooks for him and does his laundry. I pay the taxes and all bills. I'm fed up with his old jokes and gabby relatives. In brief, I wish I was alone again, looking at 7-year-old movies on TV—with the cat—FOOLISH FIFTY.

Dear Foolish: Many lonely widows who marry a second time spend the evening of their lives in contentment. You just made a poor selection, which can happen the first time around the track, too.

Confidence Lacking

Dear Ann: I'm 15. My best fella is 16. Rod and I aren't going steady but neither of us dates anyone else.

A certain girl Rod used to go with calls him on the phone every night. He thinks she's a positive creep and has told her so to her face but she won't give up.

What can be done to get this pushy female to leave my boy friend alone?—TIED-OF-HER-PESTINESS.

Dear Tied-Of-Her-Pestiness: (or should I say Afraid-Of-Competition?) Don't look now but your lack of confidence is showing. If you were sure of your ground the phone calls would hand you a laugh.

If Rod is reporting the girl's every move he's probably sitting back enjoying it immensely—and encouraging her quietly. All this action makes him look like a Big Man. Smarten up.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting—And How Far To Go," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope).

Tips for Parents

Nagging Undermines Child's Confidence

By HELEN R. HEWSON

"My husband calls me 'Aggie Argue' (yes my name really is Agnes). He thinks I do an endless and useless amount of talking trying to get our two boys to do this and that.

I try to explain to them what they are to do and how and why. But it does seem to deteriorate into an argument. I know it is ridiculous that two children three and five years of age should be able to make me feel so nervous and tense and unsure of myself.

WHAT TO DO

What can I do? This is a paragraph from a long letter in which mother describes her struggles through the daily routines, dressing, toilet, meals, bedtime. There are also playtime troubles to worry her.

She asks for a formula, a pattern for each of the routines. This will be of very little help to her unless there is a change in her understanding of children's basic needs.

TOO MANY WORDS

Children are not mechanical dolls to be pushed this way and that. They are human beings with human needs and one of these is the need to feel useful, competent. There are many words and phrases used to describe this need, a sense of accomplishment, of self-worth, self respect, etc.

Mother wants the hands washed, the toys picked up, the meal eaten. The child wants play and food. But he also wants nourishment for his growing sense of independence, of self-help. "How" is just as important as what is done.

Mother arranges the timetable for small children, and if necessary gives a little practical help. She does it quietly, deftly, in a way that does not diminish the child's own feeling of accomplishment.

OWN EFFORTS

His own efforts are most important, especially those first fumbling attempts at self help.

Too much talk, call it what you will, explanation, scolding, nagging, undermines the child's feeling of being useful. It also teaches him that he can keep mother stirred up, on

Tour Roundup Shows Canada Missing Out

By Dorothy Wrotnowski

The New World is trailing in the tourist business according to Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Nordal, who have recently returned from a trip to Europe.

The trip through Portugal, Spain, France, Switzerland, Germany, England and Scotland was, for the Nordals, a fact-finding tour of the tourist industry. They are owners of the Embassy Court and Redwood Motel.

In these countries the Nordals could not find any literature about Canada. There is absolutely nothing being done to attract the Europeans to the Western Hemisphere, the Nordals said.

ONE-WAY TRAVEL

With boats and planes booked solid far in advance to take thousands of Canadians and Americans abroad each year, both Joe and Jessie Nordal feel that something concrete should be done to bring the European tourist here.

Another salient point noted by Jessie Nordal was that no European country would tolerate that "little bit of old England" tag that Victoria often puts to the fore.

Italy is out to prove Italy has the most beautiful, the most this and that; France, Portugal, and Switzerland, the same.

ADVERTISED WELL

That Switzerland has a reputation for girls' schools isn't any wonder to the Nordals. Large posters advertising these schools greeted the travellers everywhere they went.

"Plainly we are missing a bet by not making the most of what we have—we should be selling the beauty of this country across the ocean now that travel has become within reach of so many," says Jessie Nordal.

Money restrictions have been lifted or at least lightened in most European countries now. They can buy tickets for travel abroad in their own currency and have an adequate amount to spend while on holiday.

NOT AWARE

However, if the European isn't aware of the novelty and enjoyment of a trip to the New World or what he may do when he arrives, he will keep on taking his holiday in other

Mrs. J. G. Nordal acquired several oil paintings on a recent trip to Europe. She stands in front of a floral painting by Jean Baptiste that she bought in Spain.

European countries, the Nordals say.

In comparison, prices in Europe were not unreasonable and might be said to be on a par with this country. The Nordals did find that costs had risen quite steeply since their last trip to the old country four years ago.

ROME JAMMED

Rome they found quite expensive but jammed with tourists even in late October. A sight-seeing tour that took them to St. Peter's where they—jammed with 30,000-40,000 other sightseers—saw Pope John.

Handkerchiefs and almost anything available were used to cover heads when the Pope appeared amid cheers, hand-clapping, grinding movie cameras and flashing of photographic bulbs.

An ordinary room, by Canadian standards, costs from $10 to $12 a night in most places and though there might be a swank, uniformed doorman to greet them, the Nordals didn't encounter one room with TV.

Motels are practically nonexistent in Europe and parking facilities in the big centres do not exist, they said.

One big difference the Nordals noticed was that while a Canadian place is judged by the sleeping accommodation, the European is based on the public rooms, such as dining and lounge.

The Nordals did a lot of looking, walking and questioning before coming to their conclusion. If you doubt that, "I wore out two pairs of shoes in 10 days," Jessie proudly asserts.

Like most travellers visiting countries for the first time, the Nordals had some amusing experiences.

Headed for the opera in Rome, they failed to make their destination understood to the taxi driver. Suddenly, Joe raised his arm high and burst into an aria from La Traviata. In a flash the driver turned and delivered them to the Opera.

WINE BREAKFAST

Then Jessie tells this one on herself. A little fed up with Joe (better at making himself understood), who was ordering all the meals, she tried herself.

"We were on the train going from Nice to Rome," says Jessie. "I said, you order what you like and I'll choose what I want myself."

"I pointed to one thing in each section thinking that way I'd be playing it safe."

The breakfast served to her was two bottles of wine, two fish, a serving of spaghetti and a fancy dessert.

"But I wasn't as bad as the American woman who landed up with $10 worth of cheese for the same meal," Jessie says quite emphatically.

Retiring president, Mrs. J. A. Cox gave a report on the year's activities and was thanked for a successful year.

Named vice-president was Mrs. E. F. Hagarty; treasurer, Mrs. D. Fish; secretary, Mrs. E. A. Popham; and corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. R. Taylor.

Miss Ruby Simpson, president of the board of management of the VON installed the new executive.

Miss Esther Janzow gave a report on her rehabilitation

Speaker Says: German Unity Not in Sight

"I can see no immediate hope for a unified Germany," said Victoria University lecturer, Mr. John Wood, speaking on East and West Germany yesterday before the ladies of the Canadian Club at the Empress Hotel.

He advanced two main reasons for his conclusion.

The first was that Russia doesn't want to give up any part of her Empire.

NOT KEEN

The second was that at the moment, West Germany is not too keen to take over "the derelict economy of East Germany."

Mr. Wood made a vivid contrast between the prosperity of West Berlin and the poverty of East Berlin, divided as they are as capitals of the respective zones.

TWO CAPITALS

He told how Stalin appointed a German Communist as governor of East Berlin and the curious state of affairs which developed with one city functioning as two capitals.

"It is difficult to refuse a citizen of the West, the right to visit their capital in the East. So many services have to be shared—such as transportation."

"This has many side effects. For example, the Reds may announce how rosy life is in the East, but when the Western visitor can see how life really is from close observation, Red propaganda is wasted."

SQUALOR

They can see the "Communist Paradise" which is squalor and misery. They also see the "show places" specifically designed to impress visitors.

"From the opposite angle, Russian troops, observing the Western side are being infected with capitalistic ideas."

"As a result the Communists have never been able to consolidate East Berlin as they wished."

Mr. Wood pointed out that there is one powerful radio in West Berlin which does little else but change fictional Eastern Zone propaganda into truth.

WARNINGS

"Another function of this station is to warn Eastern Germans about to be placed under arrest, that the event is going to take place."

"West Berliners will be the last people on earth to be deceived by Soviet myths."

The lecturer also emphasized that Mr. Khrushchev "would like to remove this awkward and embarrassing island of capitalism from the middle of the Soviet Empire."

Mrs. English Heads Group Sixth Term

Re-elected for a sixth term as president of the Christ Church Cathedral Women's Parish Guild, Mrs. J. F. K. English was thanked for her past leadership and presented with an armful of chrysanthemums by Very Rev. Dean Brian Whitlow, at the annual meeting recently.

Mrs. D. Mitchell, Mrs. T. H. Evans and Mrs. J. M. Wells are the new vice-presidents, and Mrs. B. Whitlow is recording secretary. Other members of the new executive include Mrs. C. Riach, Mrs. W. G. Winkel, Mrs. E. B. Greenhill, Miss B. Morley, Mrs. C. H. Dale and Mrs. M. Stubbs.

Reports showed that $2,590 was raised by the Guild at a garden party and Christmas Tea. The sum of $1,325 was presented to the Church wardens for repairs to the Deanery, and for extra hymn books and collection plates.

James Bay branch, although small in numbers, made over $700. Half that sum was given to the wardens and donations were sent to the Anglican Theological College in Vancouver. Part was used for the repair and upkeep of the James Bay Hall.

ESQUIMALT LODGE. Esquimalt Chapter, IODE, will hold the annual dinner-meeting in the Blue Room, 1303 Broad Street on Tuesday, Feb. 9 at 6 p.m.

Western Women Trapped Says Rossellini's Sonali

Most Impressed
By Jealousy
Between Sexes

By ROSEMARY BOXER

ROME — Sonali Das Gupta, from India, now lives in Italy. It is exactly two years since she arrived from Paris to begin her new life. Up until that time she had lived quietly and respectably in India with her Indian film producing husband, and their two sons.

In 1957 she met Roberto Rossellini in Calcutta, and worked closely with him on his film of India. Everyone speculated about their relationship. And the story of their romance was the final break in the marriage of Ingrid Bergman and Roberto Rossellini.

Today Sonali and Roberto live in a villa 10 miles outside of Rome with their daughter, Paola, and Sonali's younger son.

I went out to see Sonali to find out whether or not she has become acclimatized to living in Europe and to find out about her complicated life with Rossellini.

When I arrived she was sitting in a white velvet armchair wrapped in a magnificent emerald green and gold shawl over a matching sari.

COLOR CONTRAST

The contrast of colors was fabulous.

"I hope you won't be too hot here," she said as she gracefully walked towards me, "but I find European winters very cold."

She told me how quickly

Italian Waistlines Wander

ROME (UPI)—Italy's high fashion designers began their previews of spring and summer collections yesterday and the initial word is anything goes—if it is flattering, colorful and sexy.

There are no hard-and-fast rules about hemlines this season. Mingolini-Gugenheim likes skirts not quite 16 inches off the floor. Gattinoni votes for hemlines 17 inches above sea level.

Waistlines wander between the bosom and the hipline.

CGIT to Mark Youth Week

President of the CGIT Girls' Council and a member of the Board will travel to Vancouver next month to attend a Girls' conference. This was announced at a recent meeting of the CGIT Board, held in St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, when Miss W. Ripley reported on the activities of the Council.

A coffee party will be held in the Douglas Room of HBC, Saturday, Jan. 30 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 to 4.30 p.m. to usher in Youth Week which will be observed from Jan. 31 to Feb. 7. Conveners will be Mrs. W. J. McIntyre, Mrs. T. Cooper, Mrs. J. W. Stephen, Mrs. R. McGill and Mrs. F. Radcliffe.

REVIEW No. 1

Program for the year's activities will be discussed at a meeting of the Women's Benefit Association, Review No. 1, Jan. 17 at 2.30 p.m. to be held at the home of the district manager, Mrs. K. Schmeiz, 2645 Cedar Hill Road.

Sonali chats with Rossellini in the garden of their Italian villa.

Rossellini had put extra heating into their villa, and had sent to India for more shawls.

"Could you have gotten used to European life without Rossellini?" I asked.

"It would have been almost impossible to have acclimatized myself here, and to have lived through the many difficulties that I have encountered, if I hadn't had Roberto at my side. He is such a wonderfully understanding man; he also understands my country better than most Europeans, which is important.

When I arrived in France two years ago to begin my clandestine life, it was the first time I had ever left my native land.

"Roberto is a much misunderstood man; it's only those of us who are close to him who know how kind and thoughtful he is to everyone who is near to him."

"What do you think of the western style of dressing?"

"In most cases I think European women have good taste, and wear clothes that are suitable to their way of life. But the one thing that really con-fuses me is the twice yearly change in styles . . . do you think it's necessary?"

Her voice never rises above a soft, calm tone and it's almost as though she were talking to herself.

"What do you think of western women?"

"I think the western woman leads a very hard life, partly because of the structure of the society in which she lives, and partly because of the after-effects of the war. She yearns to be emancipated, but she is trapped!"

GREATER LIBERTY

"In my country, women are much more restricted . . . I don't think it's right. But with our restrictions, we seem to enjoy a much greater liberty, much more freedom than the Western women. We don't have the same problems nor do we have the same worries."

"In India, the father is always the master of the house, but nevertheless he would never make a decision that affected the family without consulting his wife. On the other hand, his wife is the boss in the household and no man would dream of interfering."

"What's your opinion of the relationship between Western women and men?" I asked.

"That which has impressed me most is the rivalry, and even jealousy between men and women in Europe. One gets the impression that they are continually at war, instead of helping and supporting each other."

"I have noticed with astonishment that some women are even jealous of their husband's success."

"Do you intend to write a book about your life in Europe?" I asked.

"I hope to keep a daily diary of my impressions and my reactions to the things around me. I listen to people talking, but talk very little myself. I write the notes in my diary in my own language, Bengali, and one day I will publish them for the people of India."

Pork Best Buy Now

Calling all cooks . . . here are some hot tips from a butcher on buying and cooking meat which may take a few wrinkles from your brows.

Pork is the best buy for this week's dinners, and next week it will be even cheaper.

Spare ribs vary between 49 and 59 cents, boneless shoulders which are Boston Butts from 59-69, Tenderloin is about $1.15 but will drop soon. Although expensive is a good buy as there is no wastage.

For households with freezers it is suggested that a little co-operation with a friend or neighbour will give some economical cuts. Loins weighing 10 pounds would average about 54 cents a pound. Shared with another customer it would mean 5 pounds of loin chops sitting in your freezer at a reasonable price.

BEEF PRICE STEADY

Veal is right out of season.

Prices of good beef are steady. Brisket at 35 cents a pound is about the most you can get for your money and is a good buy if you are prepared to cook it carefully. It needs three to four hours at an oven temperature of 275 to 300 degrees. Boned, trimmed and rolled it will still only be about 59 cents a pound. Corned beef is the same price.

FREEZING EFFECTS

Producers of fruit and vegetables in California and Mexico had a few setbacks recently. The temperature dropped to 17 degrees in San Francisco last weekend and it has been freezing there for about a week.

Southern California and Mexico have suffered with floods and frosts which is going to effect future prices of lettuce, tomatoes, celery, carrots and oranges. Supplies of lettuce are poor at the present time.

Broccoli and cauliflower have not been bothered by storms and there are plenty of good quality ones to be had right now.

For more cheerful news, quality and supplies of grapefruit are at their very best.

During January and February this fruit is loaded with juice and sugar. Fruits are larger and because size varies they are being sold by the pound. Price is about 27 cents for two pounds.

MARMALADE ORANGES

This is the moment to buy Seville marmalade oranges if you are keen on making your own preserves. They are here from Arizona and selling at 29 cents for two pounds which is cheaper than usual but will be sold out by next week, so hurry, hurry, hurry . . .

To finish up with the humble potato. The choice of

What's Cooking!

Casseroles Use Leftover Meat

By LOUISE MOORE

Casseroles are requested more often than anything else at this time of year—and why? Because they make good use of leftovers, are easy to fix and can be prepared early in the morning, ready for last-minute heating. And there are fewer dishes to wash.

WHITE SAUCE

Of course if you prefer to make a white sauce, it can be seasoned any number of ways to change the character of the dish entirely. Sliced olives, pimientos and green peppers, worcestershire, tabasco, chili powder or curry—all add up to difference in flavor for a right tempting dish.

A favorite dish in far eastern countries is Pilaff, and this version I am sure you will like.

MUSHROOM PILAFF

Wash and slice 1 pound mushrooms. Put ¼ cup cooking oil or other fat in frying pan and when hot sauté, 1 medium onion minced, 1 green pepper seeded and cut in short shreds, 1 tbsp. chopped parsley, 1 cup canned tomatoes, ½ tsp. salt and ½ tsp. pepper. Simmer uncovered until vegetables are tender and practically all liquid has evaporated—about 10 minutes.

COOK RICE

At the same time cook 1 cup rice in 2 cups rapidly boiling salted water with 1 tbsp. tomato paste added using tightly covered saucepan. When rice is tender moisture should be completely absorbed. Stir the cooked rice into the hot vegetable mixture and let simmer gently about 2 minutes. Serve at once.

Serve hot with cold ham. Good with cold cuts for a buffet supper. Serves 6.

PORK CASSEROLE

Put ¼ cup butter or bacon fat in skillet and when hot, put in 1 cup sliced mushrooms, 3 tbsp. chopped onions, 1 tbsp. each of chopped parsley and pimiento. Cook until onion is tender but not browned.

Blend in 3 tbsp. flour, ¼ tsp. salt and a dash pepper. When smooth gradually add 2 cups milk and ½ cup hot water in which is dissolved 2 tsp. chicken stock base (get it at the spice counter at the supermarket). Cook gently over low heat stirring constantly until thickened.

DICED MEAT

Add 2 cups diced cooked meat such as chicken, turkey or pork. Mix well. Place 1 ounce package cooked and well-drained noodles in baking dish and top with the meat mixture and then a layer of crushed potato chips—just a thin layer or omit it if it isn't on hand. Bake in hot oven about 20 minutes. Serve with a mixed green salad, crusty bread. Serves six.

MORE SUGAR

Per capita consumption of sugar in Britain now is about two pounds per person per week, compared with 1½ pounds 50 years ago.

Union 'Out' —Nigeria

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP)—Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa, prime minister of this most populous state in Africa, Wednesday rejected overtures from Prime Minister Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana for a union of West African states.

"Nigeria will not surrender its sovereignty to any other country right after winning independence," Sir Abubakar said.

South Africa is a discredit to the Commonwealth because of its racial policies and if it doesn't change, it should give up the membership, he said.

Macmillan assured Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland that Britain will maintain its protection unless their people freely choose the independence in federation with white-dominated Southern Rhodesia.

Envoy Changed

Russia's ambassador to Britain since 1953, Jacob Malik, was recalled yesterday for what Tass called "transfer to other (unidentified) work." Replacement is Aleksander Soldatov, an expert in U.S. affairs.

Head-Shaving Captain Fired

SEOUL, Korea (UPI)—A U.S. army captain was relieved of his command and a sergeant received a reprimand Tuesday for shaving the heads of two Korean prostitutes caught sneaking into an army camp.

GHANA READY

Only last week, Nkrumah said Ghana was ready to surrender its sovereignty to a union of African states.

The Nigerian prime minister will lead Nigeria to independence Oct. 1.

Virus Forces Halt to Trial

Garden Notes

Dig Despite Frost

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

At this season of the year, a crackling log fire in the fireplace and a couple of new seed catalogues to study offer more attraction than the outdoor chores. In fact, there is very little that can be done outdoors when everything is sloppy wet. However, we do get the occasional exhilarating day when the sky is clear, the sun is shining, with perhaps just a touch of frost in the air to make you feel energetic. Such days shouldn't be wasted indoors.

One thing to remember is that it does no harm to dig over bare ground in the vegetable plot while there is a crust of frost in the soil. A lot of garden books tend to deplore the digging of frozen soil, but I have never found any harm resulting from this practice, and a bit of digging provides some much-needed winter exercise if we are to tackle the heavy spring chores without flabby muscles.

There are a few things to keep in mind, though. Never turn the frozen soil under, as this delays the warming up of the ground in the spring. Neither should frozen soil be turned against the roots of newly planted shrubs, trees or perennials.

The trick here is to skim off the frozen crust in slabs and set it aside to be returned later. A pile of such frozen slabs will provide some wonderful soil later on for potting and seed-starting, too, for it will break down into beautiful fine stuff as a result of the frost, and the cold seems to have some purifying influence on soil.

Never try to work a heavy, sticky clay soil when it is soggy wet. The mere walking around on such soil is enough to cause it to become compacted, and the clods, when they dry out, will be like so many bricks.

With heavy clay soil, it is best to wait until the moisture content is low enough for the clods to fall apart with the touch of a rake. So, if you don't get your heavy ground dug over during that dryish spell last fall, better wait until the March winds get in their drying licks.

Another useful cold-weather job is the wheeling of manure and distributing it over the garden. This can be a sticky and infuriating job when the wheel of the barrow gets all gummed up with mud and when you pick up a couple of pounds of garden every time you lift your foot. Wheeling is easy, though, when the ground is frozen; moreover, the manure doesn't seem to be quite so smelly in cold weather.

Still another satisfying outdoor chore for frosty weather is the cutting down of long grass in neglected, overgrown parts of the garden. When the grass is stiff with frost, tackle it with a scythe or sickle, or if you can't use a scythe—I could never get the hang of it—get yourself one of those grasswhip things you use like a golf club.

The rough, thick grass falls like magic when it is frosted, and you can cut close enough to the surface to leave it all ready for the lawn mower in the spring. It is great fun and grand exercise to whack off the overgrown grass under these conditions.

The Viewing World

Hedda Surveys Her People

By John Crosby

What's the first thought that pops into your mind when you see the following list of people—Francis X. Bushman, Gary Cooper, Ricardo Cortez, Bob Cummings, Marion Davies, Walt Disney, Janet Gaynor, Bob Hope, Hope Lange, Harold Lloyd, Jody McCrea, Don Murray, Ramon Navarro, Anthony Perkins, Debbie Reynolds, James Stewart, Gloria Swanson and King Vidor?

Well, the first thought that pops into my mind is Hollywood. But the second—and more interesting thought—is that most of these people are getting along in years. Not all of them, of course. Debbie Reynolds and Anthony Perkins and Jody McCrea are not old but they are certainly outnumbered by the old folks. And the third thought—all these thoughts occurred at about the speed of light and getting them properly numbered took some doing—was that none of the young personalities really has the candlepower of the older ones. Perhaps Hollywood is dying and Beverly Hills is just a suburb, albeit a rich one.

Anyhow, that was the cast of "Hedda Hopper's Hollywood," a TV show on NBC-TV Sunday night. Miss Hopper, wearing a face that I suspect Loretta Young had loaned her for the afternoon, was discovered on the top of a mountain looking down majestically on the earth people like God. "This is the story of my town," she intoned, and I expected a little bush to burst into flame. "There's no town like it in the world. It's business is make-believe."

Is this a new thought? I think I've heard it somewhere before. As a matter of fact, much of this program consisted of very famous faces appearing before the camera and saying things we've all heard before. Anthony Perkins explained how hard it was to be an individualist in Hollywood. Bob Cummings recited how he got discovered in pictures which sounded vaguely as if it took place in the paleozoic age. Gary Cooper said—and I quote: "I like getting back into ten-gallon hats. Yep!"

Ramon Navarro and Francis X. Bushman told stories about making "Ben Hur"—the first Ben Hur thirty-five years ago. Just about then the room began to smell a little musty, as if you were exploring the attic. It got worse. Miss Hopper at one point paused in Cecil B. DeMille's office, and, with reverence reserved for sacred objects, pointed to the great man's chair and said: "He sat right there when he planned the parting of the Red Sea." (So that's where that was planned.)

There were shots of James Stewart taking his brood off to church—easily the wildest action shot of the hour—and there was Harold Lloyd waving from what seemed like eastern Illinois. (It's a big backyard he's got). Marion Davies exclaimed: "It's so nice to have you here. Welcome to my home." (I wonder who writes her stuff.)

Saddest shot of all was when Hedda bobbed up in the old Paris Opera House of the "Phantom of the Opera," a wild rumor swept my living room that Lon Chaney was playing all the parts, including Hedda's. Not a word of truth in it, I checked. They were using the old Phantom set for "Johnny Staccato," the TV show. The idea, I guess, was to show the continuity of Hollywood. The old order dieth and the new generation is born. But the trouble is, I didn't get that feeling at all. I felt as if Hollywood had gone from two reels right back to two reels—and the captains and the kings and Cecil B. DeMille are long gone.

While we're on the subject of the long ago and far away, "Twentieth Century" on CBS-TV last Sunday recreated "The Week that Shook the World," namely the week preceding Second World War, and it seemed like the Battle of Hastings—important but distant and sort of quaint. (Putting gas masks on children, for heaven's sake.)

There were the voices again of CBS's famed foreign correspondents—Edward R. Murrow in London, Eric Sevareid in Paris, William L. Shirer in Berlin. They all sounded so young, so appealing, so earnest, and—by today's standards—unprofessional. Seems like only yesterday I was turning those voices on every morning before going to work to see how the world fared. Was it really twenty years ago?

Bad Luck, Good Luck?

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Jerry Wald's "Sons and Lovers" production has had some hard luck, and that sometimes means good luck for the film. After losing $15,000 a day while Joan Collins decided she would not star in the D. H. Lawrence story, thieves stole $5,000 worth of costumes from players Mary Ure, Heather Sears, Wendy Hiller and Dean Stockwell, which again held up the picture.

Shirley Maclaine's next, "All in a Night's work," for Hal Wallis, will precede her schedule for husband Steve Parker in Japan.

Efrem "77 Sunset Strip" Zimbalist detested motel living and trotted back to wife Stephanie for a New Year reconciliation.

Charlton Heston, with money in the bank and prestige in the larder, will just have time to move into the new home he built in Hollywood before reporting to Sir Laurence Olivier for their play in New York.

We have our own form of payola in Hollywood—top stars give free guest appearances in return for one—like Bing Crosby promising to appear for Perry Como in New York March 16. In return for which Como warbles on Bing's Hollywood show. Bing has promised to deliver his four boys on both shows. No comment as yet from rebel Gary.

Billy Wilder is hoping to retame his money-making trio of "Some Like It Hot"—Marilyn Monroe, Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon. Both Billy and Marilyn collect a cool million. Tony's share will add up to a nice $750,000. And for this kind of money, the males are prepared to forgive and forget those mornings when Mmmmm kept them waiting while she got "into the mood."

Don't get Marilyn wrong. She's not the only one thataway. From Lana Turner to Ava Gardner, if they don't feel "in the mood" of mornings, they take their time about reporting to the set.

Talking of Miss Gardner, she has told her agents she wants to star in a comedy, the next time around—"A role like I had in 'Mogambo,'" to be filmed in Europe. It won't be long now before the tax-free Awa can afford to retire.

Maria Schell comes by her honey blonde hair naturally. On the set of "Cimarron" Maria revealed: "I massage orange honey into my hair before shampooing. It's very common in Europe." Greer Garson prefers champagne. More plebeian stars use beer.

Italian stars will have to buckle down to perfect their accents if they wish to remain in American pictures. Anna Magnani is difficult to understand in "The Fugitive Kind," isn't too clear in "Solomon and Sheba." She's asking for Pamela Danova, the English actress who married Cesare Danova, to coach her in Metro's "Go Naked in the World."

Let's Talk

By Rudolf Flesch

Digest Article Proves Indigestible

Some months ago I wrote in this space about the British psychologist, Dr. H. J. Eysenck, and his devastating attack on the Freudians.

Now the Reader's Digest has discovered Dr. Eysenck and runs an article by him, "The Truth About Psychoanalysis."

I was delighted to see the piece but then I looked a little more closely and began to have doubts.

In the first place, the Digest runs the article under the caption "Springboard for Discussion." Of course I know what that means. It means that in a month or two there'll be another article by a prominent psychoanalyst, saying Dr. Eysenck is all wrong and neatly cancelling out everything he said. I've never seen the Digest fail to handle a controversial issue in this way.

Magazine Perverts Doctor's Opinions

But that isn't the main point. The main point is that Dr. Eysenck's Digest article criticizes psychoanalysis as such—that is, the visits to a psychoanalyst, the couch, and the whole Freudian routine—but does not contain anything against other methods of psychotherapy. If you read the Digest, you get the impression that Dr. Eysenck considers non-analytic psychotherapy just fine.

Well, he does not. In his book "Uses and Abuses of Psychology" (Penguin) he makes it perfectly clear that he thinks all methods of psychotherapy—all mind cures—are phony and unscientific. Writing about psychotherapy in general, he says, "the data fails conspicuously to show any positive consequences to follow its use."

The Digest article contains no trace of Dr. Eysenck's criticism of psychotherapy. On the contrary, it carries an "editor's note," explaining to Digest readers that they should distinguish between a psychoanalyst and a general psychiatrist. A general psychiatrist, the note goes on to say, "uses psychotherapy (discussion of the reasons for behavior)."

Doubtless Dr. Eysenck will be discouraged when he discovers this ingenious footnote, which turns the meaning of the article upside down. But he should realize that the Digest simply can't say anything against psychotherapy. Why? Psychotherapy is its stock in trade. Basically, the magazine is a mail-order psychotherapy business, and the world's largest and most successful one at that. Its chief message, end lessly repeated, is "It's all in your mind" and "Forget about your troubles."

Or, in the words of an article in the same issue as Dr. Eysenck's, "Write your worries on the sand."

All I Want Is Andrei

PARIS (UPI)—Remington former chauffeur Andrei Miss Benedict said, "She would give me anything in the world, cars, furs, anything, but it's my birthday on Friday and she cannot understand that all I want for my birthday is Andrei."

Miss Benedict said Porumbeanu, 35, were secluded in an apartment in a super-bourgeois district of Paris not night but as a virtual prisoner. "I could not care less for eighteen-year-old Gamble and my grandmother's money."

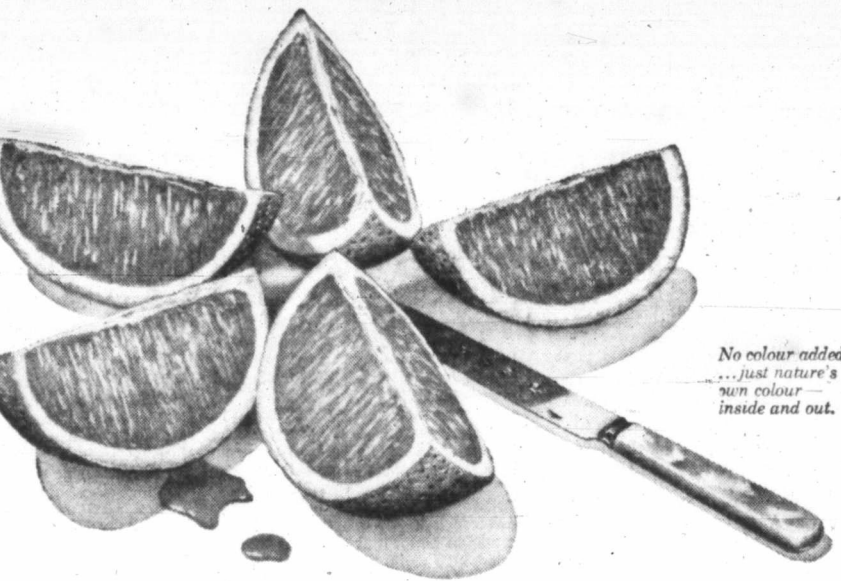

But over the horizon clouds were beginning to appear. Robert Hoffman, lawyer acting for Gamble's grandmother, was consulting French legal contacts trying to find a way to reach Miss Benedict.

Sub Killer on Display Today

A week-long Royal Canadian Air Force marine display featuring the anti-submarine Argus, the RCAF's latest addition, starts this morning in the windows of Eaton's department store. A model of the Argus,

Mild Virus

'Q-Flu' Strikes In Nine States

WASHINGTON (AP)—Outbreak of mild influenza has spread to nine states, including Washington, by upsets community routine in various parts of the United States, closing schools, dropping production and delaying justice.

Nine states have reported outbreaks—Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Michigan, California, Nevada, Utah and Hawaii—and there were signs that other states might be added soon.

In Washington state, for example, officials were concerned that it might hit hard in Seattle in coming weeks.

"There has been a moderate spread of flu carried back to Seattle from Los Angeles by people who went to the Rose Bowl football game," they said.

In Los Angeles, the "Q-flu" kept 20 per cent of the city employees, 15 per cent of the industrial workers, 10 to 15 per cent of the students and 10 per cent of the teachers at home. Illness struck judges, jurymen, prosecutors, witnesses and defendants, causing a jam in the courts.

Health officials termed the virus the "Q-flu" because it has not been identified. The Q stands for question mark.

Canadian Jet Passes Test

MONTREAL (UPI)—The Canadair CL-41, a new type of jet aircraft almost entirely the product of local firms, has passed its first test flight with flying colors, a Canadair spokesman announced last night.

The airframe of the CL-41, a jet-powered basic trainer with side-by-side seating, was designed and produced entirely by Canadair as a company venture. Its JT-12 jet engine was designed and developed by the Canadian Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Co.

ARCTIC PEAK

Jan Mayen Land, an island in the Arctic between Norway and Greenland, has a mountain peak reaching 8,350 feet.

Blacklist 'Success'

Africans Hail Buying Ban

LONDON (CP)—A boycott movement calling on Britons to blacklist South African goods in protest against that country's racial policies was termed an immense success Tuesday—six weeks before it is due to begin.

Tennyson Makiwane, a South African Negro who directs the movement, said news of the proposed boycott had reached his countrymen "and the effect is heartening to see."

"For the first time they know outsiders care about them. This alone has made the movement an immense success."

PEAK PERIOD

The plan, which appears to be gaining increasing support in Britain, calls for a complete boycott of South African goods during March—the peak period for fruit imports from South Africa.

After that, organizers hope Britons will continue to boycott the goods without any urging.

African organizations in South Africa asked last June that Britons boycott South African goods for "moral and economic" purposes, thus bringing pressure on the government to change its racial policy.

Heading the movement with Makiwane, who is United Kingdom representative of the African National Congress, is Patrick van Rensburg, white member of the South African Liberal party.

The movement has so far won support from the Labor party, the Christian Action Organization, the National Council for Civil Liberties, some trade unions and the Liverpool city council.

OPPONENTS, TOO

The movement also has opponents. Several newspapers suggested South Africa may retaliate by placing a boycott on British goods.

Van Rensburg replied South Africa never will boycott British goods "because if she could get along without Commonwealth preferences, she would have left the Commonwealth before now."

Evening Gowns, Striped Pants a Must Today

OTTAWA (CP)—For the fourth consecutive time since the end of the Second World War the opening of Parliament today will be a formal affair—women in evening dress and men in morning coats and striped pants.

Military and diplomatic representatives will wear the official dress of their rank and country.

After the outbreak of the Second World War the form of dress was made optional for those attending the colorful ceremony in the Senate chamber. This continued during the post-war period until October, 1957, when formal dress was required for the opening of Parliament by the Queen.

Following the Progressive Conservative election victory in 1958, Senate Speaker Mark Drouin made formal dress a requirement for parliamentary openings.

Women attending the opening are careful to select gowns that complement the scarlet-red carpet in the upper chamber.

Mme. Georges P. Vanier will make history for she will be the first consort of a Canadian governor-general to accompany her husband at the opening of Parliament. (Former Governor-General Massey, first Canadian representative of the Queen in Canada, was a widower.)

She will sit to the left of Governor-General Vanier as he reads the speech from the throne setting out the sessional legislative program of the government.

Mrs. John Diefenbaker, wife of the prime minister, will wear a statuesque sheath gown of cream satin brocade embroidered in gold and cocoa thread, enhanced by a side-panel.

She will be beside Mr. Diefenbaker and Senate Leader Walter Aseltine and Mrs. Aseltine to greet the governor-general and Mme. Vanier on their arrival from Government House.

Canada's stately, silver-haired first lady will wear a gown of ruby red velvet styled with a full skirt, square neckline and tight-fitting sleeves.

However, Canada's three women members of the Commons will not wear formal attire. Immigration Minister Fairclough, Margaret Aitken, Conservative member for York-Humber, and Mrs. Jean Casselman, Conservative member for Grenville-Dundas, have chosen afternoon dresses.

Fire Truck Ignores Shut Firehall Door

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—The fire truck raced out on a fire alarm Tuesday night, right through the door of the new $85,000 fire station.

Officials said the door had been lifted by automatic equipment, but it apparently closed again just as the engine was starting its run.

Opens Today

Battling Session Expected

OTTAWA (CP)—The government and opposition parties square off today in what may be the fightingest session of Parliament since the Progressive Conservatives came to power in 1957.

The final touches were put on the government's legislative program earlier this week. Indications are that it will be relatively light but the Liberal and CCF opposition groups will not lack for issues on which to fight the government.

BIG ISSUES

The big issues likely will be related to the government's defence, financial and trade policies.

The government will propose Jacques Flynn (PC—Quebec South) as deputy speaker of the Commons, succeeding associate defence minister Seigny who relinquished that office on entering the cabinet.

NO TROUBLE

Relying on its big majority, the government is unlikely to experience any trouble beating down opposition motions. Standing in the 265-member Commons is: Progressive Conservatives 208, Liberals 49, CCF 8.

In the field of legislation, the government is expected to re-introduce Prime Minister Diefenbaker's proposed Bill of Rights, combines legislation, and a measure to remove the requirement that recipients of Old-Age Pensions must live at least six months of the year in Canada.

NUCLEAR SCRAP

On defence, Liberals and CCF may concentrate heavily on government plans to acquire nuclear weapons, and especially on arrangements for custody of nuclear missile warheads and control of their operational use.

High interest rates and tight money can be expected to become familiar words once again during Commons debates.

Canada's perennial trade deficit is also likely to be a major topic.

Reds Voluble, Canada Mum

OTTAWA (UPI)—Northwest Territories councillor Robert Parrit said Wednesday it was easier to obtain information from the Soviet Embassy about the Russian north than it was from the federal government about the Canadian north.

He said the Soviet Embassy here regularly sends him its daily news bulletin while he must write to several government departments to get information about goings-on concerning northern Canada.

Ill Wind Blows Good for Skindivers

While most Victorians stayed close to the fireplace yesterday when bitterly cold gusts up to 63 miles an hour buffeted the area, a half dozen intrepid skindivers took advantage of the occasion along Willows Beach to ride the big breakers on surf

Damage Widespread; Bolivia, Chile Shaken

LIMA, Peru (AP)—Sixty-three persons were killed and more than 200 were injured Wednesday in an earthquake felt in three countries, according to radio reports from the area.

A state of emergency was proclaimed in Southern Peru. The quake shook areas of Peru, Bolivia and Chile.

EMERGENCY CITED

The reports from Arequipa, in southern Peru, said the suburbs of Tingo, Tiabaya and Miraflores were hardest hit.

Another minor quake was felt in the region, the reports said, but there was no word of additional casualties or damage.

The major quake occurred early yesterday morning. First reports from the area were fragmentary.

Landslides knocked out communication lines, hampering receipt of detailed reports of casualties and damage. But the quake was said to have caused widespread destruction.

PLANES SENT

The government in Lima sent planes to the scene with relief supplies and equipment, including tents for housing persons left homeless. The quake also was strong at Cuzco and Ica in Southeast Peru and in nearby Bolivia. It was felt as far south as Santiago, Chile, but was not severe there.

Arequipa is about 460 miles southeast of Lima.

City Graph Got Record

The quake was recorded with an intensity of seven on the seismograph at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory here. Instruments were activated at 7 a.m., seismologist W. G. Milne said. "It was definitely as intense as the Montana quake last summer."

Russian Right

Russia has every right under international law to test a powerful new space rocket over the central Pacific, President Eisenhower said yesterday. He said it would be "very unusual" for the U.S. to protest since it started such tests.

'Disaster' Declared

KAPOHO, Hawaii (UPI)—Kilauea volcano erupted in a stream of molten lava last night hours after the 300 residents of Kapoho village had been evacuated because of pre-eruption earthquakes.

The eruption came a mile and a half north of Kapoho at approximately the same place that the volcano broke loose on Feb. 28, 1955, and discharged lava for 89 days. The sky was lit with a red glow.

NO SURPRISE

The eruption came as no surprise as quakes had been jolting Kapoho at the rate of five a minute.

Kapoho was declared a disaster area and its residents evacuated because the lives of some 6,700 persons living in the district were threatened.

Money-Talks Line 'A Complete Lie'

Traffic Drove Man to Drink

VANCOUVER (CP)—The traffic here drove Clement Couture, 28, an out-of-town logger, to drink, he told police Tuesday. He said he couldn't drive unless he had been drinking.

He was fined $125 for impaired driving and his licence was suspended for six months.

Colwood Mountie Slain

A young RCMP constable from Colwood was killed while trying to arrest an Eskimo for drunkenness at Cambridge Bay, N.W.T., north of the Arctic Circle.

The shooting of 22-year-old Constable Colin Eric Lelliott was the first violent death of a Mountie in the Arctic since Albert Johnson, the notorious "mad trapper," gunned two officers 28 years ago.

RCMP headquarters in Ottawa reported Wednesday that Constable Lelliott was killed by rifle fire at 7:45 a.m. Tuesday while trying to arrest

Anti-German Tide Rising in Britain

LONDON (Reuters)—Widespread anti-German feeling was spreading throughout Britain Wednesday as a protest against the neo-Nazi, Jew-baiting outbreak in Germany.

The West German embassy claimed that German employees are being dismissed from British firms, German products are being boycotted, and threatening letters connected with the anti-Semitic incidents are pouring into the embassy.

INSULTED IN STREETS

The issue broke out in big newspaper headlines in West Germany and was confirmed here by the embassy.

"Germans are being insulted in the streets" in England, one German newspaper report said.

Embassy press attache Christian Huebener confirmed here that a visit to Britain by the West Berlin city tourist "information bus" had been postponed.

Huebener said the embassy had compiled a list of firms concerned in anti-German incidents and sent it to Bonn. Persons who were fired were told it was "because they were Germans," he claimed.

The Frankfurt newspaper Abendpost said an official of the embassy in London, Joachim Ritter, had accused Bonn of having a "mistaken conception of the extent of the anti-German mood in Britain" and of "trying to discount the present tension."

The Abendpost said "German" clergymen and clubs in London confirm with concern that the friendly relations between Englishmen and Germans established since the war have been almost completely broken off.

DUNCAN—Cowichan Guides will not receive a tax exemption on their property, council has decided.
Mayor Jack Dobson said yesterday he feels the Guides' inability to pay $131 in taxes was due to a "lack of management."
Council members indicated they are in favor of increasing their $25 annual grant.
They felt that if rents to Scout groups and admission charges to square dances were increased, for the use of their Cairnsmore Hall, the taxes could be met.

Crossing, Parking

Duncan Tackles Traffic Tangle

DUNCAN—A "concerted effort" to eliminate parking and traffic problems here will be city council's main aim this year.

Consulting engineer Russell Potter was given the green light yesterday to prepare plans for a third crossing of the E & N Railway tracks and to make preliminary cost estimates for a parking lot to accommodate close to 200 cars.

It was suggested by Mayor Jack Dobson that "one or two" members of the council might tour northwestern United States to study parking problems and how they are solved.

MARKET MOVE
The mayor also said that as part of the preparation for starting work on the parking lot, the public market will be moved or demolished by Feb. 1. The stallholders will be offered free rent and space at the back of the parking lot for a year, he said.

Property has already been leased next to the armories on Government Street from the Cowichan Indian band.

MODEL UNIT
He added: "It could be a model, efficient unit. But I think we can see it filled in two years. Maybe we should look for more land."

On the railway track crossing—over five sets of track—Mr. Potter said: "The idea is certainly okay. An asphalt road could be put in, leaving the tracks so they can be used."

"There are more cars than trains, so let's stop the trains."

We'll Fight to Stay in Victoria, Says TCA President

Trans-Canada Air Lines will fight "to the best of its ability" to keep its Vancouver-Victoria-Seattle service from being taken over by Pacific Western Airlines.

TCA's position was made clear yesterday by president Gordon McGregor in response to enquiries by The Daily Colonist.

Because of the time lapse between first announcement of PWA's interest in the service and the filing of its final application, Mr. McGregor said, TCA has proceeded with its long-range plan to modify Viscount aircraft for use on the Vancouver-Victoria-Seattle routes.

And this, he said, "together with other changes which have occurred indicates TCA's very definite interest in retaining its operations through Victoria.

"To be specific TCA has every intention of intervening at any hearing of the PWA dians, Mr. McGregor said. application held by the Air Transport Board and will contest the application to the best of its ability."

Apert from monetary considerations as the national carrier TCA feels it has an obligation to provide the best possible air service to Canada. "The company feels that the Vancouver-Victoria service should be served by a carrier with sufficient fleet capacity to be able to cope with extraordinary peaks in both cargo and passenger traffic inherent in the West Coast route. This is exemplified by what has occurred during protracted periods of interrupted surface transportation."

In view of runway and approach conditions at Patricia Bay, Mr. McGregor said, and other relevant factors, TCA "is not prepared at this time to make any commitments with transcontinental flights to Victoria. On the other hand, it would be economically impossible to justify such an operation unless the cost of maintaining personnel and facilities at both the airport and downtown reservations office was supported by the continued operation of the Vancouver-Victoria and Vancouver-Seattle operations."

But Handful Go Along With Architect's Views

A lot of Victorians may be living in "cracker boxes," as a city architect charged yesterday, but a survey of homeowners last night showed a complete absence of wholesale remorse.

City Architect Roderick Clack said the average Canadian is determined to build a ranch-style house on a 60 by 120-foot lot in the country.

Most Victorians reached by the Colonist last night either resented the term "cracker box" as applied to their homes, or said they liked their cracker boxes just fine.

"I'm inclined to agree with the term," said Mrs. W. D. Anderson, 2136 Allenby, "but it seems you more or less have to conform. There doesn't seem much chance to vary the looks of your house—or the district. It will look much better when boulevard and other trees are grown."

Said Mrs. D. P. North, 1622 Richardson, who lives in the midst of what Mr. Clack would call a cracker box district.

'We Really Want Waterfront'

"We're trying to buy another house. I quite agree with the description. We really want a waterfront house, but when the time came we had to buy this one 'on spec'."

"I don't like the idea of row houses. (Mrs. North is from the Old Country, and families with these homes.) I think they're a retrograde step."

"However, most people can't afford architects to design their own homes, and these are the best compromise they can reach between their income and what they'd really like."

Mrs. H. T. Moore, 2981 Ashdowne, in the old Willows district, is another housewife who is very happy with her home.

It was not built by the Moores, but purchased when about two years old.

"We've been here a little more than three years," she said. "At first it was rather bare, but the trees and shrubs are growing, and the district's looks improving each year. We like it."

Willows District Singled Out

The Willows racetrack district was singled out by Mr. Clack as an example of the type of housing with "all the disadvantages and none of the advantages that single family dwellings should have."

H. J. O'Neill, 2720 Eastdowne, also in the Willows area, said new homes in Victoria, Oak Bay and parts of Saanich "are extremely original."

He said row housing was a wartime development and that portions of Esquimalt are prime examples of this.

"I think people in our district would object very strongly to the term 'cracker box' as it might apply out here."

He said his own home was architect-designed and so were those of most of his neighbors.

A woman whose late father used to be a builder, Mrs. W. H. S. Mowat, 2978 Westdowne, another Willows resident, said house architecture seemed to improve sharply about four years ago.

"I certainly think the houses of today are far better," she said.

"But if I were to say what my father would have said I guess some of the architects wouldn't be very flattered."

'Going Way Out on a Limb'

"They're going way out on a limb—when they say our houses today are like cracker boxes. I think there is a trend towards smaller lots, which is unfortunate. I believe we should stagger the placing of our houses on bigger lots."

She would not like living in a row house development where "everyone is one big happy family, living in each other's pockets."

D. W. C. Huggins, 1657 Richardson, said he doesn't agree if the term "cracker box" is meant to imply an unsound construction.

"But we are getting to be pretty uniform in appearance. Anyone coming home and not thinking too sharply might find himself overshooting his own house."

A good reason why "only the odd fellow goes out on a limb" is that the unconventional house is liable to have a lower resale value, he said.

He felt row housing developments would only lead to "another system of uniformity."

Ours Not Cracker Boxes

"I certainly don't think our houses are cracker boxes," said W. Lloyd Roberts, 1722 Albert.

There is a tendency towards "sameness" in houses, he said. "I like a bit of variety. As long as a house is 'rept in good condition no one should have anything to say about it."

"Location means a tremendous lot to any house," said Attilio Randy, 3318 Oak.

"A good garden is like the frame around a fine picture. We have some very beautiful houses, but we have some crazy ones, too, like modernistic art."

He would like to see housing developments planned around communal recreation areas.

Bay, said "when you get a few thousand houses you've got a job on your hands making each one look a bit different. I don't know how we are going to alter the look."

PWA Air Bid Faces Mounting Opposition

Mayor Confronts Airline Man

Opposition to Pacific Western Airlines taking over the service between Patricia Bay and the mainland was unanimously recommended yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce transportation group.

Today, city council is expected to oppose it too, for the same main reason: that being served by a local or regional carrier instead of a national carrier would be "a regressive step."

"NO SIR!" Mayor Percy Scourrah, who spoke at the chamber group's meeting in favor of continued service by Trans-Canada Air Lines, said later that at council's meeting today "there may be some debate but I expect the results will be the same. I'm not changing my mind, no sir!"

The recommendation of the harbor and transportation group will be given to Chamber of Commerce directors for consideration.

It came after the group heard Harold Brandreth, PWA sales and traffic director, present his company's case and answer questions.

ANY QUESTIONS?

One of the "questions" was more of a statement, and it was from the mayor:

PWA's proposal, he said, would relegate Victoria to a feeder service permanently, because Canadian Pacific Airlines couldn't land its transcontinental Britannias at Patricia Bay without lengthening of the runways to 7,000 feet, and TCA couldn't be expected to keep Victoria facilities open for one or two transcontinental flights a day.

Also, he said, it looked to him as if PWA's proposed three 40-passenger Fairchild aircraft would be a minimum number—his understanding was that TCA would have five 60-passenger Viscounts. (He said later he wasn't talking through his hat about the Viscounts, and added that he had been speaking by telephone yesterday to TCA president Gordon McGregor.)

COMPETITION CITED

Mr. Brandreth, in answer, said that if the service was put in the regional category, there would be competition between the transcontinental carriers for Victoria business, and PWA would apply if TCA withdrew.

CPA, he indicated, would require suitable terminal facilities and runways, and "to get them you have to have a carrier who requires them, not one that is going to be satisfied with what you have."

Viscounts, he suggested, wouldn't fly beyond Vancouver—"In my opinion this is a feeder service and has been, and by the TCA plan will remain a feeder service, so it's not an issue."

PEAK POSSIBILITIES

Mr. Brandreth also maintained that PWA could handle peak loads experienced in the past by TCA, and said the airline would keep up with future demands.

Mayor Scourrah said he couldn't follow Mr. Brandreth's argument that having PWA service would improve Victoria's position regarding the airport facilities.

"Supposing PWA had it, and CPA said they'd like to come in for one or two flights a day, wouldn't the Air Transport Board say you're already served well?" he said.

Evening Gowns, Striped Pants a Must Today

OTTAWA (CP)—For the fourth consecutive time since the end of the Second World War the opening of Parliament today will be a formal affair—women in evening dress and men in morning coats and striped pants.

Military and diplomatic representatives will wear the official dress of their rank and country. After the outbreak of the Second World War the form of dress was made optional for those attending the colorful ceremony in the Senate chamber. This continued during the post-war period until October, 1957, when formal dress was required for the opening of Parliament by the Queen.

Following the Progressive Conservative election victory in 1958, Senate Speaker Mark Drouin made formal dress a requirement for parliamentary openings. Women attending the opening are careful to select gowns that complement the scarlet carpet in the upper chamber.

Mme. Georges P. Vanier will make history for she will be the first consort of a Canadian governor-general to accompany her husband at the opening of Parliament. (Former Governor-General Massey, first Canadian representative of the Queen in Canada, was a widower.)

She will sit to the left of Governor-General Vanier as he reads the speech from the throne setting out the sessional legislative program of the government. Mrs. John Diefenbaker, wife of the prime minister, will wear a statuesque sheath gown of cream satin brocade embroidered in gold and cocoa thread, enhanced by a side-panel. She will be beside Mr. Diefenbaker and Senate Leader Walter Asetline and Mrs. Asetline to greet the governor-general and Mme. Vanier on their arrival from Government House. Canada's stately, silver-haired first lady will wear a gown of ruby red velvet styled with a full skirt, square neckline and tight-fitting sleeves. However, Canada's three women members of the Commons will not wear formal attire. Immigration Minister Fairclough, Margaret Aitken, Conservative member for York-Humber, and Mrs. Jean Casselman, Conservative member for Grenville-Dundas, have chosen afternoon dresses.

'PROVE BRIBE AND I'LL QUIT'

Opens Today Battling Session Expected

OTTAWA (CP) — The government and opposition parties square off today in what may be the fightingest session of Parliament since the Progressive Conservatives came to power in 1957.

The final touches were put on the government's legislative program earlier this week. Indications are that it will be relatively light but the Liberal and CCF opposition groups will not lack for issues on which to fight the government.

BIG ISSUES

The big issues likely will be related to the government's defence, financial and trade policies.

The government will propose Jacques Flynn (PC—Quebec South) as deputy speaker of the Commons, succeeding associate defence minister Seigny who relinquished that office on entering the cabinet.

NO TROUBLE

Relying on its big majority, the government is unlikely to experience any trouble beating down opposition motions. Standing in the 265-member Commons is: Progressive Conservatives 208, Liberals 49, CCF 8.

In the field of legislation, the government is expected to re-introduce Prime Minister Diefenbaker's proposed Bill of Rights, combines legislation, and a measure to remove the requirement that recipients of Old-Age Pensions must live at least six months of the year in Canada.

NUCLEAR SCRAP

On defence, Liberals and CCF may concentrate heavily on government plans to acquire nuclear weapons, and especially on arrangements for custody of nuclear missile warheads and control of their operational use.

High interest rates and tight money can be expected to become familiar words once again during Commons debates. Canada's perennial trade deficit is also likely to be a major topic.

Reds Voluble, Canada Mum

OTTAWA (UPI) — Northwest Territories councillor Robert Parritt said Wednesday it was easier to obtain information from the Soviet Embassy about the Russian north than it was from the federal government about the Canadian north.

He said the Soviet Embassy here regularly sends him its daily news bulletin while he must write to several government departments to get information about goings-on concerning northern Canada.

Ill Wind Blows Good for Skindivers

While most Victorians stayed close to the fireplace yesterday when bitterly cold gusts up to 63 miles an hour buffeted the area, a half dozen intrepid skindivers took advantage of the occasion along Willows Beach to ride the big breakers on surf

Damage Widespread; Bolivia, Chile Shaken

LIMA, Peru (AP)—Sixty-three persons were killed and more than 200 were injured Wednesday in an earthquake felt in three countries, according to radio reports from the area.

A state of emergency was proclaimed in Southern Peru. The quake shook areas of Peru, Bolivia and Chile.

EMERGENCY CITED

The reports from Arequipa, in southern Peru, said the suburbs of Tingo, Tiabaya and Miraflores were hardest hit. Another minor quake was felt in the region, the reports said, but there was no word of additional casualties or damage.

The major quake occurred early yesterday morning. First reports from the area were fragmentary.

Landslides knocked out communication lines, hampering receipt of detailed reports of casualties and damage. But the quake was said to have caused widespread destruction.

PLANES SENT

The government in Lima sent planes to the scene with relief supplies and equipment, including tents for housing persons left homeless. The quake also was strong at Cuzco and Ica in Southeast Peru and in nearby Bolivia. It was felt as far south as Santiago, Chile, but was not severe there. Arequipa is about 460 miles southeast of Lima.

City Graph Got Record

The quake was recorded with an intensity of seven on the seismograph at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory here. Instruments were activated at 7 a.m., seismologist W. G. Milne said. "It was definitely as intense as the Montana quake last summer."

'Disaster' Declared

KAPOHO, Hawaii (UPI) — Kilauea volcano erupted in a stream of molten lava last night hours after the 300 residents of Kapoho village had been evacuated because of pre-eruption earthquakes.

The eruption came a mile and a half north of Kapoho at approximately the same place that the volcano broke loose on Feb. 28, 1955, and discharged lava for 89 days. The sky was lit with a red glow.

NO SURPRISE

The eruption came as no surprise as quakes had been jolting Kapoho at the rate of five a minute.

Kapoho was declared a disaster area and its residents evacuated because the lives of some 6,700 persons living in the district were threatened.

The quakes split the streets of Kapoho.
